Realty embraces AI

From pricing and design to forecasting material needs, artificial intelligence is rewiring this $585.09 billion machine

Lalatendu Mishra

India's real estate is now seeing the power of AI. The rapid transformation of the sector has been improving the efficiency across the entire project life-cycle, from design and planning to construction, sales, and post-handover services. With elements such as property price comparison tools, neighbourhood analysis, land identification and micro-market shifts, biometric access systems, smart lifts, water quality monitoring and forecasting materials, it has been a real game-changer.

In India's rapidly evolving market, AI is moving beyond tactical automation to become a structural enabler, refining micro-market pricing, strengthening tenant and buyer analytics, optimising leasing and sales conversions, and improving construction and operational efficiencies, according to Vivek Rathi, national director-research, Knight Frank India, a global property consultancy firm.

Algorithms help

"By enhancing capital allocation, protecting margins, and enabling data-led decision-making across both commercial and residential segments, AI is emerging as a critical driver of long-term, risk-adjusted performance and competitive differentiation," he emphasised.

In a marked change from the past, new technologies like AI, machine learning (ML), virtual and augmented reality (VR/AR), blockchain, and data analytics are transforming the way in which properties are marketed, bought and sold across the country.

According to Aayush Puri, head of ANAROCK Channel Partners & ANACITY International, a B2B technology platform and app, AI integration into all aspects of the real estate business is "continuous, cumulative and unstoppable. With plans to have data centres orbiting the planet in the future, even the sky is no longer the limit". "The age group of buyers is also changing. Millennials and Gen Z are expected to make up 60% of the market by 2030. The need for smooth digital experiences, such as with immersive virtual tours and instant, AI-driven, personalised recommendations, has become a must-have," Puri says.

He added that the best consulting firms are now using predictive analytics and machine learning to 'crack the code' of how customers behave online.

"When we talk about Proptech – the overarching digital transformation of real estate – we are by default talking about AI because it is literally the 'brain' that gives Proptech its intelligence," Puri says.

"While Proptech provides the digital infrastructure and data, AI processes that information to enable predictive analytics, automated valuations, and personalised customer journeys. This turns static real estate data into actionable, high-value market insights," he added.

AI Platform.
Built Different. Built for NRIs

The Future of Real Estate Is Here. And It Talks to You.

AI Property Search Built for Smarter Real Estate Decisions

+ What you're looking for, and I'll

India's real estate market is on fire. Diaspora wealth is booming. And finally, artificial intelligence is poised to alleviate the coordination headaches that have long plagued property investment. Yet most NRIs are still stuck in the past: scrolling through generic portals, wading through endless listings, and staring at dashboards that resemble spreadsheets more than user-friendly solutions.

Enter Checkdoors.com. Founded by US-based tech veterans who themselves struggled with property purchases in India, this platform isn't just another real estate site—it's built from the ground up for the NRI experience. The team didn't just notice the problem; they experienced it firsthand. This firsthand frustration became the driving force behind a platform designed around how NRIs actually buy property, rather than how others presume they should.

Checkdoors.com sits at the crossroads of three seismic shifts: a booming market, rising diaspora wealth, and AI that finally delivers on its promise. Its conversational AI isn't a gimmick—it's a guide. By simply sharing your budget, city preferences, school proximity, or rental yield expectations, the platform is able to surface the right five properties—not five hundred. Because it's NRI-first, the platform has a unique dataset that no one else can match. Every search, every shortlist, and every transaction teaches the AI something new—making it smarter, sharper, and far more tailored with every interaction.

The advantages extend beyond buyers. Builders benefit too, as AI-scored leads appear directly on their dashboards. They gain access to global NRI expos at their fingertips, and analytics provide actionable insights to drive their sales strategies. The vision of Checkdoors.com goes far beyond mere property discovery, seamlessly managing every aspect of the real estate journey. From the first search to post-purchase maintenance, Checkdoors.com is engineered to handle it all. Tenants, compliance, and upkeep are managed effortlessly, even from thousands of miles away. This level of service ensures that buyers remain engaged for years while builders can close deals faster. As a result, the network grows: every new buyer attracts more builders, and every new builder brings in more buyers. This isn't just a portal; it's your AI-powered real estate partner. Imagine a platform that matches new listings to your preferences even before you begin your search. It alerts builders when high-intent NRIs are ready to invest, coordinating across time zones to ensure seamless connections between buyers in California and builders in India. With over 30 builders on board, 500+ leads delivered, and more than 1,000 NRIs engaged at exclusive US expos, Checkdoors.com is proving that AI can transform the global property market—one conversation at a time. Furthermore, it acts as a bridge for NRIs looking to invest in their homeland while managing their overseas commitments. Its streamlined approach not only simplifies the search for properties but also enhances the overall investment experience.

As the demand for real estate continues to grow globally, particularly from the NRI community, platforms like Checkdoors.com are setting a new standard. They eliminate the barriers typically faced by international investors, offering them the tools they need to make informed decisions. With technology at the forefront of this transformation, Checkdoors.com is not just adapting to the future of real estate; it's actively shaping it.

The future of real estate is indeed here, and with it comes the promise of empowerment, accessibility, and unwavering trust, making property investment in India less of a headache and more of an opportunity. If you are an NRI looking to navigate the complex world of real estate, Checkdoors.com is your ultimate destination—your partner in this exciting journey.

Visit checkdoors.com today. Your ideal property is waiting.

Green pedestal

Designed in white ash wood and making a case for an interesting bedside accent

₹64,000

Nicobar

This fern side table features a round top paired with a ridged base. Its green finish brings a sense of depth, while the white ash wood construction keeps the look refined. This piece works beautifully as a bedside table or a sculptural accent beside a sofa or chair.

Commenting on the potential of AI as far as real estate is concerned, Sachin Duggal, founder and CEO of SeKondBrain.AI, an AI-powered knowledge management system, says, “Real estate has always been an information business pretending to be only a physical one. AI makes that explicit.”

“Done well, this improves conversion and trust, because the experience feels guided rather than sales-led,” Duggal points out.

Developers say they have been continuously strengthening their approach to planning, designing and delivering projects by adopting modern systems and smarter processes. “This helps us understand customer expectations better, improve construction efficiency and maintain high standards of quality across every development,” says Rohit Gupta, CEO of Pune-based Mantra Developers.

“Our commitment is to stay ahead of the curve while ensuring that every advancement ultimately benefits our customers,” he adds.

Chatbots for queries

In the emerging senior living segment, AI is deployed extensively. Senior living is entering a transformative phase with technology poised to become an essential part of the planning and execution.

“The requirements and needs in today’s world have moved beyond age-friendly design to the development of intelligent communities that integrate AI-powered health notifications, IoT-based safety solutions, remote health monitoring and seamless telemedicine connectivity,” says Anil Godara, founder and managing director of J Estates, a Delhi NCR-based real estate developer.

These advancements empower seniors to live independently while being under constant medical observation and ready access to emergency services. At the same time, families gain reassurance through real-time updates and transparent care coordination, he added.

Pricing models

According to Sudeep Bhatt, director-strategy of Whiteland Corporation, a Gurugram-based, modern real estate development company, AI is rapidly becoming integral to every touchpoint in Indian real estate, from land identification and investment feasibility to design optimisation, sales intelligence and post-possession services.

Beyond transaction, AI is transforming ownership itself, enabling intelligent home management, predictive maintenance and seamless resident experiences through smart ecosystems, he mentioned.

Bhatt added that at Westin Residences Gurugram, smart home environments, predictive maintenance and hospitality-led services have come together to anticipate resident needs and deliver a seamless and elevated lifestyle experience.

Design help

Vikas Bhasin, managing director, Saya Group, a real estate developer in the Delhi-NCR region, believes that one of the most significant benefits of AI lies in the design stage of a project.

“Today, AI-enabled tools allow developers to create, test, and refine designs much faster with greater precision. Developers can visualise each aspect of the projects in detail even before construction begins, enabling better planning, optimisation of space, and more informed decision-making,” he adds.

Virtual tours, smart visualisation tools, and AI-powered customer insights help potential buyers clearly understand the project, its amenities, and its overall value proposition. “This significantly improves buyer confidence and transparency in the purchase process,” says Bhasin.

Kamlesh Thakur, co-founder and managing director of Srishiti Group, a real estate developer and construction company in Mumbai, is of the view that AI is rapidly transitioning from being a buzzword to becoming a business-critical tool in real estate.

Cost optimisation

AI is also playing a key role in cost optimisation. Data-led insights allow developers to streamline procurement, optimise construction timelines, reduce material wastage, and enhance project planning accuracy. In sales and CRM, AI-powered chatbots and automated engagement tools ensure faster response times and better customer experience while lowering operational overheads, he adds.

For Shilpin Tater, managing director of Superb Realty, a Mumbai-based real estate developer, AI is no longer a futuristic add-on in real estate; it is fast becoming the operating system of modern developments.

Air quality monitor

“We are deploying AI and intelligent building management systems to make our commercial assets more responsive, efficient and health-centric. At our recently launched project, Superb Altura, AI-driven systems continuously monitor indoor air quality, energy consumption, HVAC performance and occupancy patterns, enabling real-time optimisation rather than static control,” says Tater.

“This intelligence not only helps us push indoor environments towards significantly lower AQI levels despite rising outdoor pollution, but also delivers measurable operational benefits, including 15%-25% energy optimisation and reduced downtime through predictive maintenance,” he adds.

Ashok Nawany, chairman and co-founder of Nawany Group, a Mumbai-based developer, says, “This journey began with a fundamental realisation: technology is only as effective as the people wielding it. Consequently, our first step wasn’t software acquisition, but AI literacy.”

Nawany adds that they have successfully institutionalised a comprehensive six-month training programme, ensuring every team member – from site supervisors to senior management – is fluent in the language of tomorrow.

Currently, the company is in the process of integrating Kaizen AI, a proprietary platform that utilises multi-parameter optimisation to enhance design efficiency and maximise ROI without compromising architectural intent.

“Looking ahead, our roadmap includes the deployment of 3D digital twins for immersive marketing as well as evaluating and integrating building management systems (BMS) into the twin to optimise energy and operational costs,” he adds.

These could be the early days of AI adoption in the real estate sector, but as technology evolves fast, the deployment could be more intense in the future.
