Raising the bar on design

From brutalist interiors and Art Deco influences to thoughtful lighting and acoustics, six bars across South India show how architecture is reshaping the drinking experience

Anisha Menezes

India has three bars in Asia's 50 Best Bars list in 2026: Boilermaker (Goa), Soka, and Bar Spirit Forward (Bengaluru) for their flair and inventive cocktails. But the drinks are not the only focus. Across the country, bars have upped their design game as well, with a focus on architectural storytelling, acoustic comfort, daytime adaptability and a spotlight on the ergonomic bar counter itself.

We take a look at six bars across South India, over five metrics: materiality, bar design, convenience, acoustic-lighting design and, finally, daytime adaptability.

The freelance writer is based in Chennai.

No Name, Chennai

Studio Kaleidospace, a Chennai-based interior design studio helmed by Daphne D'mello and Nirali Bathia, created a 1,500-sq.ft. resto-bar, No Name, in Nandanam. Generous arches, an electric blue bar, and stained glass windows punctuate a large hall with architectural drama.

Architectural style and materiality

The arches were born of the two large beams that interrupted the ceiling space. "We wanted to hide them and the semi-circular shape was the perfect vehicle. The arches are repeated on the bar, stained glass windows, and form alcoves facing the street," says Bathia.

The bar

The apron is cloaked in hand-painted, high-polished, electric blue. Framing the wall behind it, is the massive arch that holds a custom-printed canvas of a Renaissance sky. Overlaid on the artwork a bespoke black iron trellis serves as a floating bottle rack.

Acoustic and light design Intentionally intimate lighting is created with antique brass and cast-iron chandeliers hanging from the timber ceilings. Renaissance-inspired sconces illuminate the low seating arrangements.

Comfort and convenience

"The wooden flooring patterns are different across the main floor and the DJ area, so patrons don't slip even if the lighting is dim," explains D'mello. Mid-century-inspired accent armchairs alongside lounge sofas within the window bays offer comfortable seating with space for storage.

Daytime adaptability

The bar is used for lectures over the weekend.

Barback, Hyderabad

Named after the most hardworking person behind a bar, Barback in Hitech City, Hyderabad, is a twin space with Fireback, a Thai restaurant that celebrates Bangkok's vibrant night life, both in its food and aesthetic choices. The 30-seater space translates Bangkok's street vibe.

Architectural style and materiality

The use of bronze and copper tones, timber, woven textures and sculptural metalwork, celebrate a nocturnal palette. Wavy glass panels generate a sense of movement while a half-moon motif on the floor creates a striking visual focal point. "Arched forms and a dramatic canopy speak the Thai architectural language," explains Russell Sage, principal director, Russell Sage Studio, London.

The bar

It allows multiple bartenders to work across the space comfortably

Acoustic and light design

The bronze backdrop comes alive with illumination, allowing the bar to create a natural focal point. For acoustic design, "the combination of upholstered seating, timber, textured surfaces and suspended metal-mesh elements helps break up sound", explains Sage.

Comfort and convenience

"Tables are positioned to give guests a sense of privacy without compromising the lively atmosphere," adds Sage.

Daytime adaptability

For now, Barback does not host daytime events.

Brine, Bengaluru

A stark grey building without windows, wrapped in a translucent glass-brick façade, conceals more than it reveals on 80 Foot Road in Indiranagar. Inside, a 5,500 sq.ft., 120-seater, brutalist space shines with a resplendent copper bar, and is lush with Madagascars almond trees and eye-catching lantern sculptures. Brine is named after the technique of using saline (salt water) for preservation.

Architectural style and materiality

Animesh Nayak, founder and principal architect of Open to Sky, an architecture and design firm in Bengaluru and Kolkata, speaks of adaptive reuse (repurposing existing buildings for new functions) as a recurring feature in his practice. Brine, too, came with the bones of an old bungalow. Along with his associate Revathi Ramakrishnan, he says, "[We] used the sinews of the old structure [partitions and walls are maintained to demarcate areas] to fashion a bar with a lofty roof, luminous skylights, a brutalist facade in lime and thoughtful seating."

The material palette includes natural stone flooring with cobblestone paths to break the monotony, upholstered and rattan seating in warm wood, as well as a masonry bench with seating on both sides. "The walls are purposely bare, with no artwork to distract you from your company or cocktails," adds the architect. A generous outdoor space maximises the use of trees in the compound to add a natural touch.

The bar

A glistening copper metal sheet wraps around the bar, making it a shimmering centerpiece. Bottles are arranged in groups by colour, with soft lighting to illuminate them. Bar stools offer seating next to the large group area adjacent to it, exuding a Biergarten vibe in the midst of Oktoberfest.

Acoustic and light design

A pre-set playlist of European beats plays without disturbing conversation. Dimmable lamps illuminate the menus, while coloured lights shining through the Indonesian glass-brick façade set the mood by time of day, softer at noon and red-orange at night.

Comfort and convenience

Hooks hidden beneath the bar offer space for coats and handbags, a thoughtful touch. Belongings rest on armrests and benches, while spacing of the tables offers privacy.

Daytime adaptability

Local businesses conduct small group events, as the greenery and high ceilings offer a sense of openness, along with flexible seating arrangements.

The Quarter Madras, Chennai

Tucked away in the historic Savera Hotel, The Quarter Madras, a 50-seater bar starts with a foyer that leads to parlour doors, though not into a speakeasy. As the moniker suggests, it's a tongue in cheek take on the quarter (180 ml of spirit) and the French 'Quarter' sites along the Tamil Nadu coastline.

Architectural style and materiality

The material choices for the bar are rooted in the city. Amita Joy, co-founder, Studio Reve, an interior design studio in the city, explains, "Wood on the ceiling, earthy rattan for the seats and a lot of large chandeliers with fabric, makes the space look dramatic. The use of Madras checks, white-green granite, and old memorabilia of the owner's family, give it a warm Chennai vibe."

The bar

"The arches on the wall behind the bar offer a colonial aesthetic. The large library shelving allows us to add books and accessories to dress up the space for a party or event," says Joy.

Acoustic and light design

Soft music with a retro playlist is on most days.

Comfort and convenience

"We added coat hooks near the tables and bag hooks underneath so you don't have to use the floor for storage," she says.

Daytime adaptability

The space is used for private events booked either for day or night soirees.

Roc-A-Coe, Chennai

Roc-A-Coe earns its moniker from the famous 1930s-era cocktail (published in the Difford's Guide) made with dry gin and punchy sherry notes. The 80-seater bar on KNK Road, designed by George, principal architect at ING Design, pays homage through its cocktails to old punch houses of yesteryear Madras.

Architecture and materiality

"The bar's design language uses the triumvirate of balance, rhythm and proportion to pay tribute to the Art Deco era through the use of wood, glass and leather that form the material trinity," says George.

The bar

"The counter is customised so the staff can easily access spirits, tools, glassware and refrigeration, while maintaining eye contact and conversation with guests," he says.

Acoustic and light design

The lighting transitions from bright during the day, to a warm glow at night. The upholstered seating, timber surfaces and soft furnishings help absorb sound and reduce reverberation.

Comfort and convenience

The height of the bar allows bartenders and guests to comfortably reach for a glass. The luxurious upholstered high chairs and wooden benches offer ergonomic comfort.

Daytime adaptability

They host Pint of View (lectures on topics of interest with a beverage covered in the cost) over weekends.

Yaakay Bar and Canteen, Bengaluru

Yaakay means 'why' in Kannada, a sort of rhetorical question for an area bar, saying 'why not?' This is a brainchild of Byg Ventures (founder of Bob's Bars), Yaakar Bar and Canteen in Sahakar Nagar.

Architectural style and materiality

Sujit Nair, principal architect of SDeG Design, a city-based architecture firm, imagined a two-fold space: People's and Premium, on either side of a courtyard-facing bar, atop a terrace on a commercial building.

"The walls in the People's section wear a hand-trowelled plaster finish, painted in dull white, with polished Kota floors and indigo-blue woodwork reminiscent of old Bengaluru homes. The Premium section has white-inlaid green marble, polished timber seating and decorative metal screens, an ode to older Bengaluru clubs," says Nair.

The bar

Inspired by ticketing/concession kiosks in Art Deco theatres, the bar is built with green marble, Kota stone, woodwork and acrylic light boxes, to offer a classy transition between the two sections.

Acoustic and light design

There's wood wool cladding to maintain reasonable decibel levels, with retro English playlists and regional music on loop.

Comfort and convenience

The benches in the People's section offer extra space for belongings, while seats in the Premium area have a hollow space behind them for storage.

Daytime adaptability

Regulars troop in for lunch, savouring a pint and local favourites at affordable prices.

Baaya

Baaya Artful Spaces showcased Indian craft traditions layered with symbolism, material knowledge and storytelling, through skilled makers. Handcrafted mirror work with brass jali or copper enamel went beyond visual appeal. With texture came character, contributing to a distinct look. Shibani Jain, founder and creative director at the spatial design studio based out of Mumbai, said, “Our signature Ocean Floor mural is a handcrafted seascape with swirling corals, resting shells, rippled sand beds, and drifting seaweed done in copper enamel, painting and mixed media.” The pieces have the soft hues of the ocean, melting blues, and white and green to depict marine life. Jain added that the inspiration came from “feeling the ocean from the shore. It lets everything melt, like the sand that washes away from under your feet.”

Oorjaa

Elsewhere, Oorjaa's light designs with handmade paper, plant fibres, and reclaimed materials made a striking appearance. From the floor lights to wall sconces and sculptures, it exuded warmth in nature-inspired designs. The honeycomb ceiling lights stood out.

Objects of interest in Hyderabad

From sculpted stone and worked metal to painted silk and handmade paper, these brands at Design Democracy are reimagining Indian craft for contemporary interiors

Prabalika M Borah

Craftsmanship, cultural identity, heritage and personal expression are dominating interior design conversations this year. Be it through traditional textiles, artisanal wall coverings, earthy colours or reclaimed materials, the focus is shifting towards homes that tell a story with conscious design choices.

Design Democracy 2026, which concluded recently in Hyderabad, fit right in with a mix of luxury, design and art to meet the growing demand for unique spaces. A bar that collapsed to look like a set of gigantic leather travel cases. Roberto Cavalli grand cru crystal wine goblets that you have seen in the latest K-drama. Wallpaper with three-dimensional art in which a peacock's mane is studded with semi-precious stones and brass feathers.

The fourth edition catered to potential buyers who wished to think beyond green leather couches and bespoke cabinets. The exhibits unfolded as layered compositions of materiality, craftsmanship, narrative and function. Nearly 200 brands, 1,500 leading architects and designers under one roof translated into tasteful pieces of art.

On display were one-of-a-kind pieces. Imagine an artwork that moves – a wall-mounted kinetic design that changed form with a single touch, reminiscent of Mystique from X-Men. As the pieces moved within the frame, it chimed softly and went from looking like a sand dune of steel to more like a piece of jigsaw puzzle laid flat. Studio Motionworks' stall was one that made visitors pause. The Ahmedabad-based firm, with a tagline ‘things which move’, creates kinetic sculptures and lighting, apart from moving building façades. A great mix of art and engineering.

Whether through meticulously worked metal surfaces, sculptural stone interventions, hand-crafted textile expressions or the warmth of richly grained timber, the focus remained on elevating craft beyond ornamentation. A distinctly Indian interpretation of contemporary luxury ran through the exhibition. Apart from works of master craftsmen, most pieces were a reflection of technique and cultural narratives, reimagining them for modern contexts. When it came to art, the showcase urged visitors to think beyond framed pieces. Designer Gaurang Shah's hand-painted kalamkari panels on silk brought textile traditions into a contemporary design dialogue.

At Design Democracy, it was evident that walls are now treated as canvases. Labels such as Topstona, with their luxury stone collection for walls and floors, proved the same. The brand's tactile and textured brilliance shone in three-dimensional art works created with natural stone.

Collective Craft

Collective Craft, a Delhi-based design studio, integrated traditional crafts into larger architectural and interior projects rather than limiting them to small decorative products. The space divider reinterpreted pattachitra, traditionally seen on palm leaves or cloth-based scrolls, into a functional architectural element. Chief designer Sibabnand Bhool explains, “Rather than remaining as wall art, the craft is reimagined as an object that interacts with space. The movable painted discs on another piece of the space divider encourage engagement and exploration, allowing viewers to interact with the work while discovering stories embedded within it.”

Square Knots

Square Knots brought in a showstopper – a wall rug with the distinct minarets of Charminar, pigeons, the magnificent rocks and a banyan tree of the Deccan region. The rug was a tribute to Hyderabad, and this corner soon became one of the most photographed spots.

Neytt Homes

Neytt Homes from Alappuzha, Kerala, who made the Met Gala red carpet for four consecutive years, drew onlookers with the ‘Unity Rug,’ a hand-tufted black-and-white masterpiece created with designer Vanessa Meister Varma based out of Kochi. The brand also unveiled Zarbuland from their Bidri Collection, which gave a modern, ecologically conscious twist to traditional Bidriware motifs, all made from sustainable sisal.

Special exhibitions

- Four exhibitions curated by designers explored the evolving language of India's design through materiality, memory, and imagination.
- Museum of Telangana, curated by Supraja Rao, principal designer-founder of Kadari Art Gallery, showcased architecture rooted in the State's climate, craft, and regional identity.
- Also praiseworthy was the gallery of sustainability co-curated by Jasem Pirani and Huzefa Rangwala, co-founders of MuseLAB. It brought together conscious design practices from across the country, reflecting not just how we build but why we build, and exploring the designer's role in shaping an ethical, sustainable, and resilient future.
- Art Edit by political spokesperson Anish Gawande displayed an intersection of contemporary art and design, spotlighting artists who push the boundaries of creativity. The display in his gallery was art wrapped in luxury.
