Gold rush for real estate

From Chennai's high streets to tier-II towns, jewellers are Tamil Nadu's newest property power players, hunting for coveted addresses and ever-larger showrooms

Sangeetha Kandavel

Jewellery retailers are emerging as a key demand driver in Tamil Nadu's commercial real estate market. As brands accelerate expansion across Chennai and high-growth tier-II cities, real estate selection has become a critical component of their growth strategy, with location, visibility and customer accessibility increasingly shaping investment decisions. Chennai has emerged as the second-largest leasing market for the jewellery sector in India in 2025, accounting for 27% of total jewellery leasing activity, a sharp rise from 16% in 2024, according to an analysis done by real estate consultancy CBRE South Asia Pvt Ltd. Chennai recorded approximately 0.25 million sq. ft of leasing during 2023-25 in the jewellery space.

Further, the city, along with Hyderabad, Bengaluru, Delhi-NCR, and Mumbai, accounted for over 90% of total jewellery leasing volume in 2025, CBRE notes.

Industry sources say jewellery retailers typically look for showroom spaces of 3,000 sq. ft. and above, while larger brands often opt for properties spanning 10,000-12,000 sq. ft. In key high-street locations, rentals range from ₹250 to ₹300 per sq. ft.

Jewellery retailers can broadly be divided into two categories, traditional home-grown brands and pan-India chains, each with a distinct real estate strategy. “Traditional home-grown jewellery brands typically prefer owning their properties and focus on securing prime locations with long-term value,” says V.S. Sridhar, executive managing director, Tamil Nadu & Kerala, and head GCC advisory (operations & emerging cities), Cushman & Wakefield, Chennai. “For these brands, real estate is an integral part of their business model and can account for 2%-3% of the overall project cost. Pan-India players, on the other hand, largely operate on a leasing model.”

He adds that brands generally avoid malls in Tamil Nadu and prefer standalone buildings on prominent arterial roads. Such properties offer greater flexibility for branding, façade visibility, security infrastructure and product display. Mall-based jewellery retail works better in luxury retail destinations such as Delhi and Gurugram, he says.

Hot spots, high rentals

According to Sridhar, rental values in Chennai’s established jewellery corridors remain among the highest in the State. In T. Nagar’s G.N. Chetty Road, rents range between ₹250 and ₹300 per sq. ft., while in Anna Nagar they typically range from ₹200 to ₹250 per sq. ft.

Anshuman Magazine, Chairman and CEO, India, South-

Gold rush for real estate

East Asia, Middle East and Africa, CBRE, says leasing continues to be the preferred expansion model for most organised jewellery retailers, as it provides operational flexibility while allowing brands to channel capital towards inventory, technology and customer experience. “In 2025, stores above 8,000 sq. ft. accounted for 50% of total leasing activity in the jewellery sector, compared with just 14% in 2019,” Magazine says.

In Chennai, T. Nagar continues to be the city’s undisputed jewellery hub, while Anna Nagar has emerged as a strong secondary market. As the city expands, jewellery brands are increasingly establishing a presence in suburban catchments such as Velachery, Chromepet and Tambaram.

Beyond Chennai, cities including Coimbatore, Madurai, Tiruchi, Erode and Karur, along with several tier-II and tier-III towns, are witnessing robust growth and have become key targets for retailers looking to expand their footprint.

Beyond gilded stakes

Expansion today involves investments far beyond gold inventory. Capital is being deployed towards land acquisition, rentals, showroom design, façade development, vault infrastructure and experiential retail spaces. Factors such as neighbourhood affluence, traffic movement, accessibility and brand visibility are shaping real estate decisions.

“When we choose a location for our business, security is our primary consideration. Customers who walk out of our premises must feel safe. Alternatively, the location should be in a busy area where there is natural surveillance,” says Amarendran Vummidi, managing partner, VBJ (Vummidi Bangaru Jewellers). “If you look at our Anna Salai property, it is in a secure location. Today, adequate car parking has become a critical factor in site selection for jewellery retailers. Properties that can accommodate either open parking areas or multi-level stack parking systems are preferred.”

VBJ recently opened a multi-level, 14,000 sq. ft. showroom at Chennai’s Anna Salai in a secure location. The ground floor houses gold, precious and jadai jewellery. The first floor is dedicated to diamond, solitaire and platinum collections, offering a more focused setting.

The second floor moves away from conventional retail approach with Atelier VBJ, a new format for a more private and immersive environment. It features dedicated lounges, private viewing rooms, and personalised service. “The layout has been structured so each category has its own environment, making the journey more intuitive,” says Vummidi. “We have paid close attention to how the store transitions across floors – from the material choices to the overall spatial experience – so that each level serves a distinct purpose while remaining connected to the brand’s roots.” VBJ is set to open a new showroom on Usman Road in Chennai.

“In Coimbatore, we are developing what will be our largest-format store to date, spanning nearly 21,000 sq. ft.,” he adds. “We are also launching a new outlet in Tiruchi and actively evaluating opportunities in Madurai. We expect to finalise the Madurai location within the next three to four months.”

For Madurai-based Thangamayil Jewellery Ltd, location is central to store performance. Ba. Ramesh, the company’s joint managing director, says customer expectations are changing rapidly and the company is increasingly focusing on sites outside traditional ba-zaar areas that offer easier access, better parking and a more premium shopping experience.

No room for impulse buying

Ramesh says that “unlike fashion or lifestyle retail, jewellery stores cannot rely purely on impulse purchases. Customers visit with their families, spend considerable time evaluating purchases and expect a premium yet secure shopping environment. Therefore, visibility, safety and accessibility become extremely important. As a result, showroom infrastructure and location selection have become closely linked to overall brand positioning and customer perception”.

For flagship stores, visibility is especially important because the showroom itself becomes a statement of brand strength. Corner properties and road-facing buildings with larger façades are generally preferred.

Ramesh adds, “The ideal showroom size we look for is a minimum of approximately 5,000 sq. ft., depending on the city profile, market potential and target audience, as the industry is increasingly moving towards experiential retail rather than simply displaying products.”

Expanding footprints

Over the next year, Thangamayil Jewellery plans to open 10 to 15 new stores. Kerala-headquartered Kalyan Jewellers currently has 29 touch-points across Tamil Nadu, spanning major cities such as Chennai, Coimbatore and Madurai, as well as several smaller towns across the State. The company enters a market only when it finds retail space that reflects the brand’s scale and customer experience aspirations.

“Most of our properties operate on a long-term lease or rental model, which supports our asset-light growth strategy. However, we do have some marquee properties that we have developed ourselves over the years,” says Ramesh Kalyanaraman, executive director, Kalyan Jewellers. “Square footage is not one-size-fits-all. In major retail districts, we look for larger spaces that can accommodate a wider product range and provide a more immersive shopping experience, whereas in tier-II and tier-III cities, formats are more compact and optimised for local demand.”

Kalyan Jewellers’ expansion plans for the coming year remains robust, including for its Gen Z- and millennial-focused brand Candere. Its growth strategy stands on a more contemporary and digital-first retail approach.

The brand typically operates through smaller-format stores in high streets and malls, with minimalist interiors and a lifestyle-oriented shopping experience centred around self-discovery and everyday jewellery purchases. “Each brand follows a distinct retail strategy based on customer behaviour and market positioning,” Kalyanaraman concludes.

What is the singular element in a living space that instantly lifts it? Most interior stylists pick the rug as a defining décor piece that can centre a room. In fact, the Indian carpet and rug market size is seeing robust growth, set to grow 9.61% year-on-year to touch $1.87 billion in 2031, according to a Modor Intelligence report. It pegs this sturdy upward trajectory on strong domestic demand. India accounts for 40% of global handmade-carpet exports, revealing a strong affinity for made-in-India products.

One important marker of this surge is the interest and accommodation of fashion and interior designer interventions in creating bespoke rug collections. Interior stylist Ridhi Khosla Jalan says, “A designer rug helps with brand building, and rug makers invest in these collaborations, which generate interest and do well at exhibitions. It’s also setting a benchmark in the industry about what you can do with design in this space.”

We take a look at three major rug ateliers in India that have successfully integrated designer aesthetics into carpets.

Cross Continental, Jaipur Rugs, Rajasthan

Jaipur Rugs, founded in 1978 by Nand Kishore Chaudhary, showcased its collaboration with Japanese architect Kengo Kuma at Salone del Mobile in Milan in April to rave reviews. The collection seamlessly wove the wabi-sabi aesthetic into hand-tufted wool rugs.

Rutvi Chaudhary, director, explains what designer collaborations bring to the table. “Designers have begun to treat the rug as a canvas for storytelling, drawing influences from architecture, cultural memory, and even urban geometry. On the artisan side, through platforms like Manchaha [where rural weavers design original rugs on the loom using leftover yarn], the convergence of contemporary design and personal expression has pushed the boundaries of rug-making.”

The brand has a repertoire that spans 24 artist and design-

The rug renaissance

From couture-inspired collections to architect-led collaborations, India’s leading ateliers are turning carpets into collectible design statements er-led collaborations. Bodour bint Sultan Al Qasimi, an Emirati publisher and public official, has designed the latest ‘Whispers of the Desert’ collection in hand-knotted wool and bamboo silk, inspired by the ancient landscapes of Mleiha and Faya in Sharjah. She explains the tactile imprint of storytelling: “I travelled to Jaipur on several occasions to work directly with the creative team. I brought the emotional memory and the visual rhythms of our desert, and together we explored how those elements could be translated into contemporary woven art.”

For Dutch designer and art director Richard Hutten, his 2025 collection ‘Playing with Tradition’ offers sustainably crafted carpets, garnering a growing audience among homeowners. “In these times when sustainability is getting more and more important, you see a revival of natural materials such as the wool I’ve used,” he says. Chaudhary says that while in-house designs find their own homes, these designer collaborations open new doors.

Ottoman motifs, Obeetee, Uttar Pradesh

Obeetee was founded in 1920 in Mirzapur, Uttar Pradesh, by British entrepreneurs F.H. Oakley, F.H. Bowden, and J.A.L. Taylor. Its parent company is now the Kolkata-based Luxmi Group, while the brand is spearheaded by chairman Rudra Chatterjee. Rooted in India’s rich rugmaking history, (Clockwise from far left top) Paris studio Tatiana de Nicolay x Jaipur Rugs collection ‘Jardin Du Monde’; ‘Nowstalgia’ by Eeshaan Kashyap x Obeetee; ‘Insectif’ by Varun Rana; Heritage Hues Rug (The Bengal Narrative) by Ajay Arya x Cocoon Fine Rugs; Market Collection designed by Pinakin Studio x Cocoon Fine Rugs; (far left, bottom) ‘Confetti’ collection by Richard Hutten; and Crescent Gaze from the ‘Nowstalgia’ collection.

Obeetee has also forged a strong global footprint.

For Angelique Dhama, president of Obeetee, their eight recent design collaborations are a two-way street. “The most important quality in a collaborator is a strong and distinctive design voice, combined with a genuine curiosity about the craft of carpet making,” she says. The recent ‘Now-stalgia’ collection by designer Eeshaan Kashyap and the ‘Insectif’ collection by designer Varun Rana are case studies in how contemporary aesthetics are moulded by deeply personal inspiration.

Kashyap’s collection is a nod to the Ottoman Empire, illustrated in hand-tufted and hand-knotted woollen rugs with a fusion of brass, copper, and steel sculptural surfaces. For Rana’s collection, nostalgia for hand-illustrated Soviet books and a serendipitous spotting of a beetle on a rug in a verdant Mirzapur bungalow were the starting point for a collection that is in equal parts whimsical and retrained.

“Insects are visually fascinating – intricate, delicate, and incredibly diverse,” says Rana. “I did some preliminary research, only to discover that surprisingly little had been done with them in this context.” The rugs use the insect as a leitmotif to explore placement through traditional Indian patterns. These range from the structured geometry of a Mughal-style jaali pattern to the ubiquitous chatai and the rhythmic form of a Rajasthan baoli (stepwell).

Raffia-inspired, Cocoon Fine Rugs, Mumbai

For the atelier founded in 2009 by Ayush Choudhary, its 13 collaborators include fashion designers J.J. Valaya and Varun Bahl as well as architect and designer Rooshad Shroff and artist Vishaka Jindal, among other design studios. The most recent collection, ‘Market’ with designer Pinakin Patel, draws its design syntax from the stripes, pattern and movement of the colourful woven raffia market bag.

“Over the years, we have looked for design alignment and a strong narrative lens where every collection must tell a story. So we look for designers who are willing to co-create and not just design because of some demand,” states Smriti Choudhary, brand director. “Clients today want meaning and not just material. It also helps us with global positioning because collaborations help Indian craftsmanship speak a global design language.”

The freelance writer is based in Chennai.
