Builders and developers seek faster approvals, higher FSI limits, stronger infrastructure and expedited rollout of the proposed Parandur airport project

Sangeetha Kandavel

With actor C. Joseph Vijay and his Tamilaga Vetti Kazhagam (TVK) government now in office in Tamil Nadu, stakeholders in the real estate sector have a wish list for the new administration that is immediate and pragmatic. Realtors have called for faster approvals, clearer land policies and infrastructure expansion. They request investment in flood-resilient infrastructure, water management systems, roads, public transport and last-mile connectivity across rapidly growing cities and towns, while also urging the government to expedite the proposed Parandur greenfield airport project. “The real estate sector is one of the largest employment generators and economic multipliers in Tamil Nadu,” begins Ranjeeth Rathod, managing director of DRA, a Chennai-based real estate developer. “It supports over 250 allied industries, including cement, steel, electricals, interiors, logistics and financial services. The new government has a significant opportunity to position Tamil Nadu, especially Chennai, as one of India’s most progressive urban economies,” he adds. He points out that Chennai can no longer continue growing only horizontally, what with land within city limits being finite, and infrastructure costs rising rapidly. “The government should consider a calibrated higher Floor Space Index (FSI) in infrastructure-ready corridors, especially around Metro Rail networks and major arterial roads,” he continues. “Also, climate resilience can no longer be treated as a seasonal issue. Chennai requires a long-term scientific flood management strategy integrating macro drains, lakes, waterways and urban planning controls.”

The government should focus on digitisation of land records, transparent policies, and stricter action against unauthorised layouts...

Today, the cumulative impact of approvals, premiums, infrastructure charges and delays increases the overall cost of housing. Reducing the cost of doing business will ultimately make homes more affordable for the middle class and encourage more investments in the sector

W. S. HABIB
President of CREDAI

For the office sector, faster approvals for Grade-A developments, dedicated GCC clusters, improved public transport connectivity and mixed-use ecosystems will be critical as Chennai emerges as a major GCC destination

SANJAY CHUGH
City head and director of ANAROCK
Property Consultants

Currently, the FSI (Floor Space Index) limit for multi-storey buildings stands at 3.25, while for regular residential developments, it is capped at 2. During the previous government's tenure, there were proposals to increase FSI limits in line with cities such as Bengaluru and Hyderabad; the proposal was not implemented.

W.S. Habib, president of the Confederation of Real Estate Developers Associations of India (CREDAI), says that the State urgently requires dynamic and future-oriented Master Plans across all major cities and emerging urban regions. He also adds that newer master plans should focus on transit-oriented development, planned expansion corridors, satellite townships and affordable housing ecosystems. Faster approvals is something that stakeholders in the real estate sector have been concerned about.

"Today, the cumulative impact of approvals, premiums, infrastructure charges and delays increases the overall cost of housing. Reducing the cost of doing business will ultimately make homes more affordable for the middle class and encourage more investments in the sector," says Habib.

Another source in the real sector says that today, an environmental clearance takes at least five months, and a fire clearance takes three months. Additionally, around 15-16 'no objection' certificates are required. These delays slow project delivery.

Eye on Coimbatore

Habib also explains how other cities in Tamil Nadu can improve and offer the required facilities. "Coimbatore has evolved into one of South India's most promising urban growth centres. The city combines entrepreneurship, manufacturing, education, healthcare and IT growth with a very strong quality-of-life factor. Areas such as Saravanampatti, Avinashi Road and Kalapatti are witnessing significant real estate activity. The city now requires stronger mobility infrastructure, airport expansion and better public transport," he says.

Emerging corridors

Hosur is emerging as one of Tamil Nadu's most strategic growth corridors. Its proximity to Bengaluru, combined with manufacturing and warehousing investments, is creating enormous potential for residential and commercial development. Likewise, Madurai is gradually transitioning into a modern urban centre driven by healthcare, education, tourism and IT-related growth. Districts such as Thoothukudi, Tirunelveli and Kanyakumari have enormous untapped potential. Ports, renewable energy, tourism, education and industrial investments can reshape the economic profile of southern Tamil Nadu over the next years.

Next business hub

Sanjay Chugh, city head and director of ANAROCK Property Consultants, a real estate company, observes that Tamil Nadu has the opportunity to differentiate itself by creating integrated business districts, transit-oriented office corridors and experiential retail destinations. "For the office sector, faster approvals for Grade-A developments, dedicated GCC clusters (hubs of Global Capability Centres), improved public transport connectivity and mixed-use ecosystems will be critical as Chennai emerges as a major GCC destination," he says.

Ajit Chordia, managing director of Olympia Technology Park, an IT company, suggests unlocking government land for the development of Public-Private Partnership (PPP) models. He says that Chennai building development rules should be revamped. "Implement incentives promised in past IT policies like 100% free FSI - a promise not kept," Chordia notes.

Land price debate

Tamil Nadu is also home to several land developers. Bala Ramajayam, founder and managing director, G Square Group, a plotted developer, observes that Chennai, in particular, is witnessing strong demand across suburban and emerging corridors, especially in plotted developments and land investments. "The government should focus on digitisation of land records, transparent policies, and stricter action against unauthorised layouts to further strengthen buyer and investor confidence," he says. Citing the recent notice issued by CMDA that pushes for faster clearances and stricter action against malpractices, he says land prices could stabilise if such measures are implemented effectively.

What is 100% free FSI?

In Tamil Nadu, especially under the Tamil Nadu Combined Development and Building Rules, 2019 (TNCDBR), the term "100% free FSI" is often interpreted differently by builders compared to the general public. From a layman's perspective, "100% free FSI" may imply that the developer can build the entire permissible FSI without any cost. However, from a builder's perspective, it means that the base permissible FSI allowed by the regulations can be utilised without payment of any premium FSI charges.

As per TNCDBR 2019:

- Sites on 12 m road width can generally achieve FSI of 2.0
- Sites on 15 m road width can generally achieve FSI of 2.5
- Sites on 18 m or wider roads can generally achieve FSI of 3.25

This base permissible FSI is what is commonly referred to by developers as "free FSI" since no additional premium payment is required for utilising it, provided all development control regulations are complied with. Therefore, "100% free FSI" does not mean unlimited or cost-free construction potential, but refers to the allowable base FSI under the prevailing development regulations without payment of premium FSI charges.

Premium FSI

Tamil Nadu regulations also permit 'Premium FSI', which allows developers to build additional floor area over and above the normally permissible/base FSI, subject to payment of premium FSI charges.

Premium FSI allowed:

- 18 m+ road → Additional 50% of base FSI
- 12 m to below 18 m road → Additional 40% of base FSI
- 9 m to below 12 m road → Additional 30% of base FSI

How to calculate:

Premium FSI charges are calculated based on the "excess FSI area" and the guideline value of the land:

- High Rise Buildings → 40% of guideline value
- Non High Rise Buildings → 50% of guideline value

So, under the current rules, a project on an 18 m+ road can potentially achieve an overall FSI of around 4.88, subject to payment of Premium FSI charges and compliance with all development regulations.

Builders often argue that higher FSI reduces apartment prices by distributing land cost across a larger saleable area, thereby improving project efficiency.

However, evidence across Indian cities is mixed. Apartment prices are influenced not only by FSI, but also by land prices, construction cost, demand, financing, and market positioning. In many cases, higher FSI has improved project viability and developer margins rather than directly reducing apartment prices for buyers.

force, including professionals from countries such as Korea, Japan and Germany, while younger generations are also seeking more experience-driven and lifestyle-oriented urban spaces.

Industry players suggest that the State should invest in creating venues, for music concerts and other cultural programmes, along the lines of the National Centre for the Performing Arts (NCPA) in Mumbai. Suggestions include boosting the East Coast Road and beachfront with restaurants, pubs and themed spaces, establishing a Kollywood movie museum and a dedicated Film City with a drive-in theatre, creating 24x7 shopping districts in areas such as Khader Nawaz Khan Road and Anna Nagar, and exploring regulated lifestyle concepts such as microbreweries.

The Emergence of Residential Colonies in the Suburbs of Chennai

Chennai has always grown along its transport corridors. From the early expansion of neighbourhoods around suburban railway stations to the rise of IT-driven housing along Old Mahabalipuram Road (OMR), the city's residential geography has continuously evolved with infrastructure. Today, a new phase of urban growth is unfolding as large residential colonies emerge across the suburbs and peripheral regions of the Chennai Metropolitan Area.

What was once considered the "edge of the city" has now become the centre of residential activity. Locations such as Sholinganallur, Medavakkam, Tambaram, Porur, Pallavaram, Thirumazhisai and stretches along the Outer Ring Road (ORR) are witnessing rapid transformation into integrated residential zones. The shift is being driven by a combination of affordability, infrastructure expansion, employment growth and changing lifestyle aspirations.

One of the biggest catalysts has been connectivity. The expansion of Chennai Metro Rail, the development of the ORR and the proposed Chennai Peripheral Ring Road (CPRR) are significantly improving access to suburban locations. Infrastructure projects are no longer viewed merely as transport improvements; they are shaping real estate demand and influencing where people choose to live.

The southern and south-western corridors continue to dominate residential growth. OMR remains Chennai's strongest housing belt due to its proximity to IT parks and employment centres. Areas such as Navalur, Thoraipakkam and Siruseri have evolved from isolated stretches into self-sustaining residential ecosystems with schools, hospitals, malls and entertainment infrastructure.

At the same time, the western suburbs are emerging as the next growth frontier. Porur, Poonamallee and Thirumazhisai are attracting both apartment developments and plotted communities due to improving road infrastructure and relatively lower land costs. The ORR, in particular, is becoming a powerful development spine connecting industrial hubs, logistics parks and residential townships.

Interestingly, Chennai's suburban expansion is not merely about affordability anymore. Developers are increasingly creating large-format gated communities with integrated amenities, sports facilities, retail spaces and green areas. The suburban homebuyer today is looking for lifestyle, open spaces and community living rather than just proximity to the city centre. Recent large-scale launches along the ORR corridor reflect this shift toward organised township-style development.

Another notable trend is the emergence of mixed-use urban clusters. Improved transport integration, suburban rail upgrades and metro connectivity are encouraging development beyond traditional residential layouts. Peripheral areas are gradually evolving into independent urban centres rather than dormitory suburbs dependent on the city core.

However, the rapid pace of suburban growth also presents challenges. Infrastructure planning must keep pace with residential expansion. Roads, drainage, water supply, public transport and social infrastructure need to be developed proactively rather than reactively. Chennai's future growth will depend not only on creating more housing but on building sustainable, liveable suburban communities.

The emergence of residential colonies in Chennai's suburbs is therefore more than a real estate story. It reflects the city's larger urban transition — from a compact metropolitan centre into a multi-nodal regional city shaped by connectivity, employment and evolving lifestyles - Sanjay Chugh, City Head & Director, Anarock Property Consultants Pvt.Ltd.

CASAGRANT LAUNCHES 'CASAGRANT HIGHCITY' IN CHENNAI'S OUTER RING ROAD

Casagrand, one of the leading real estate developers in India today unveiled its largest-ever residential project, Casagrand Highcity, a landmark 41-acre integrated community on Chennai's rapidly transforming Outer Ring Road (ORR). Envisioned as a scale-defining development, the project brings together 4000+ thoughtfully planned 2 and 3 BHK residences across four iconic G+22 towers, anchored by a 5-acre Ultra-Modern Sports Clubhouse, aligning with the rapid transformation of the Outer Ring Road (ORR) into Chennai's next large-scale residential corridor.

Chennai's Outer Ring Road (ORR) has become an ideal destination for families seeking a peaceful yet modern lifestyle. The corridor offers seamless access to major economic clusters, including prominent IT hubs such as Navalur, Siruseri SIPCOT, Perungalathur, and Porur, along with key industrial and manufacturing centres like Sriperumbudur, Oragadam, and Ambattur.

Within this rapidly evolving landscape, Casagrand Highcity stands out as one of the first developments of this scale and configuration by an organized developer in the ORR corridor, reinforcing and fast-tracking its emergence as Chennai's next high-growth residential hub.

Spanning 41 acres, the project is defined by a strong focus on open, breathable living, with 28 acres of open spaces comprising 22 acres of landscaped greens, 3.5 acres of tropical forest, and themed gardens that enhance the micro-environment. Designed on Singapore-inspired planning principles, it integrates over 150+ world-class amenities, including 50+ sports and 25+ kids-focused facilities, creating a comprehensive ecosystem of living, leisure, and recreation. In addition to this, the project also features a 1.3-acre grand recreational clubhouse with premium indoor amenities including a gym, three mini theatres with 180+ seating, three banquet halls, a video gaming lounge, VR duo zones, and more.

Key highlights of the project include a 21,000 sq. ft. resort-style swimming pool and a landmark 5-acre Sports Club featuring over 35+ sports courts such as mini-soccer turf, tennis arenas, badminton, box cricket, bowling, pickleball, squash, billiards, and table tennis, positioning it among Chennai's most extensive sports-led residential developments. The master plan is further strengthened by a 2-acre Casagrand International School, reinforcing its positioning as a fully integrated, future-ready urban community.

JONES FOUNDATIONS INTRODUCES URBAN LUXURY IN VELACHERY

The landscape of premium living in Chennai has reached a new pinnacle with the official launch of Jones Vista, the latest residential masterpiece by Jones Foundations showcasing 36 units of urban luxury. Jones Vista isn't just a residential complex; it is a statement of modern design. Featuring an exclusive collection of luxury 3 BHK homes, the project caters to the evolving needs of urban families. With expansive floor plans ranging from 1,319 to 1,598 SQFT, every unit is an exercise in architectural grace. The layout prioritises "elegant spaces," ensuring that natural light and ventilation work in harmony with contemporary aesthetics to create a sanctuary away from the city's hustle.

The MET Gala lights up the news cycle with high fashion and art each May. But the quiet hero at the uber glamorous event is the carpet rolled onto the steps of Fifth Avenue in NYC. Over the last four years, Kerala's Neytt Homes, a Cherthala-based rug atelier, has crafted the carpet at the prestigious MET Gala.

Neytt's legacy spans over 109 years. The story begins in 1917, when K. Velayudhan set up the Travancore Mats and Matting company. It transitioned to Extraweave Pvt Ltd. at the turn of the millennium, and is now known as Neytt Homes. This year, they have more to celebrate with the opening of the brand's first flagship outlet in North India – and only its second in the country. For Sivan Santhosh, founder and CEO of Neytt Homes, and his partner and wife Nimisha Srinivas, the MET Gala carpet generates quite a buzz each May. However, converting interest to sales and partnerships required an imaginative experiential store in the heart of New Delhi. It helps build a pan-India presence, with buyers and designers thronging the crowded Mehrauli-Gurgaon Road in the national capital, home to a host of covetable rug ateliers.

Rugs on display

“Nimisha and I wanted to create a space where every rug is made visible, so we visited other rug stores in Sultanpur [South Delhi district] to see what they offered. Most resembled warehouses, where rugs were displayed on walls, and you could discover something new around each corner,” explains Sivan.

For Rahul Mathew and Priya Rose, founders of Kochi-based architecture and design firm Workers of Art, designing this store was just an extension of a childhood friendship as Santhosh and Mathew went to the same school in Kochi.

“We started ideating in September 2024, and in under six months, we completed the project so the store opening could be scheduled for late February 2025,” states Mathew about the first store in Kerala.

Crafting the basement

Meanwhile, in Sultanpur, the

From Kerala to the MET Gala

109-year-old Cherthala-based atelier Neytt Homes has opened a 4,000-sq.ft. experiential store in New Delhi, blending sculptural interiors, storytelling and custom rug design new 4,000-sq.ft. store was a blank canvas, but hidden from plain sight, as it was nestled in a basement. “We decided to take the scarlet logo itself and use the yarn motif to lead visitors to the stairway below and into the store. The yarn then transforms into a sculptural element in between two mounds draped with rugs, taking the brand's logo palette (ivory-red) and the yarn leitmotif forward,” explains Mathew.

Rose explains the layout. “We decided to forgo perpendicular corners and use undulating partitions instead. It is designed like a maze with two mounds in the centre, making the space more dynamic while offering seating for visitors and an audience space during performances.”

The mounds were created on plywood with sisal rugs over them for texture, offering an ivory-hued neutral palette. The walls are also draped with sisal, while the black tiled floor offers a stark contrast. “The three-di-plays in the background. The LED lights over the pelmets and along the floor through the store guide the eye.

Bespoke rugs & design lab

“We have introduced automation and tuning of lights to allow designers to personalise the lights from warm to cool tones, so customers can mimic the lighting in their homes as they choose a rug,” says Mathew. The final space is the design lab. It is a DIY area where in-house designers use software and four moodboards: minimalist, maximalist, traditional and colourful, along with weaving, material and dyeing techniques. Customers can see mock-ups of customised rugs on a projected screen.

“We ultimately want to include technology like AR (augmented reality), but that's a work in progress,” adds Santhosh.

Waste into threads

Sustainability and deep cultural roots are embedded across the store. The restroom is curated with a woven wall covering showcasing elements of Kerala, fitted with a brass urli as a washbasin and the fragrance of the state's flowers (kanikonna). “We like to weave sustainability into every aspect at our factory and store as well,” says Santhosh. The design lab has lamps woven by Sirohi (women's SHG) weavers using leftover yarn from the store. “We innovate with new sustainable fibres created from recycled PET and Econyl (upcycled from discarded fishing nets and nylon fabric) and offer to buy back rugs from hospitality establishments so we can completely regenerate it into raw nylon and refashion it into a new carpet.”

As Neytt sets its sights on a pan-India footprint, this flagship experiential store has brought in visibility and avenues for collaboration. “It's important to have a presence in the right place at the right time. We have one international and one Indian collaboration coming up (details to be announced soon). Even in the store, we want visitors to explore the space with a touch of whimsy, so we encourage you to climb the mound and get creative with your rug experience,” concludes Santhosh.

The writer is based in Chennai.

About Met Gala
This year for Met Gala's Costume Art theme, Neytt sent 57 rolls of white carpet, with each piece measuring up to 4x30 metres, a total of 6,840 square metre of sisal fibre woven in a bouclé technique (textured fabric and yarn characterised by its looped appearance). Sisal is the chosen material for the carpet as it is a durable, stiff natural fibre derived from the leaves of the Agave sisalana plant, used to make rope, twine and rugs. Neytt sources their sisal from Madagascar, Tanzania and Brazil. The carpet has to be tightly woven to withstand stilettos and neutral coloured so artists can paint over it, based on the theme each year. “It took around 90 days from fibre to carpet. The rug went through 15 processes with quality inspection at each stage since it was an off-white carpet, and there is no place to hide imperfections,” explains Santosh.

mensional mounds had to be fabricated by our local carpenters in Kerala and then shipped and fitted in Delhi,” Santhosh adds.

From fibre to floor

The store is divided into three areas: publication, know your rug and a design studio.

Two in-house designers and a manager's assistant guide customers as they move to the Know Your Rug section, which is populated with over 100 swatches from machine, flat weave, jacquard, tufted, hand-knotted and pit loom samples as well as types of rug material—Kashmiri wool, bamboo silk, sisal, linen, jute and banana silk.

While every rug and carpet is either hand-knotted or hand-tufted, this brand has embraced technology simultaneously with spinning equipment imported from Ireland, dyeing machines from Italy, coating machines from the U.S., and finishing machinery from Belgium

The publication wall celebrates Neytt's international footprint, from the MET Gala carpets to handwoven pieces in the White House lawn. Each rug is accompanied by storytelling around its ideation, provenance and process. “We have a coffee table-style book revisiting our history and detailing our material and design philosophy. There is a write-up with an art installation of the transition from fibre to rug, as well,” states Santhosh.

The walls come alive with vibrant rugs from the Aadu collection, paying homage to the streets of Fort Kochi, where goats often roam. The Vallamkali rugs celebrate Kerala's boat race, and motifs from nature and craft shine in the Kilivathil and Aranmula Kannadi repertoire. Multi-hued, high-pile rugs from designer collaborations offer a modern take on classical art, while other carpets evoke minimalist aesthetics. The rugs range in size, material and weaving style, priced between ₹6,000 and ₹12 lakh.

Visitors are treated to a complete sensorial experience as they feel the fibres, watch videos of weaving techniques, and a soundtrack of loom weaving
