Chennai's office market widens

GCC expansion, diversified industries, and emerging suburban corridors are reshaping the city's workspace

D. Govardan

The prolonged West Asia crisis has clouded the economic prospects of several nations, including India. However, demand for office space has remained resilient. During the first half of 2026, particularly in April-June, the country witnessed robust demand and supply of office space. This indicated that the overall economy was here to stay on a sustained growth path. While India witnessed an office space supply of 32 million sq.ft. during H1 2026, the absorption [space occupied] was higher at 45.5 million sq.ft. In the second quarter, the supply was 21 million sq.ft. and absorption remained higher at 24.6 million sq.ft. The top four cities for office space absorption and new supply are Bengaluru, Delhi-NCR, Mumbai and Hyderabad. Together, they account for 34.5 million sq.ft. of absorption and 21.8 million sq.ft. of fresh supply in H1 2026.

Comparatively, Chennai recorded 3.8 million sq.ft. of office space absorption against a supply of 1.7 million sq.ft. in H1 2026. In Q2, absorption stood at 2.0 million sq ft, while supply was 0.3 million sq.ft. "Chennai has witnessed absorption in the range of 8-10 million sq.ft. annually over the last three years. This is significantly higher than pre-COVID," says Preetham Mehra, senior executive director & head, Tamil Nadu & Kerala, CBRE. "The key micro markets contributing to this include CBD, OMR Zone 1, Mount Poanamallee Road and Pallavaram - Thoraipakkam Road [popularly known as Radial Road]."

The Hindu Property Expo brings over 200 projects across Chennai for buyers to assess locations and prices

Team PropertyPlus

Homebuyers in Chennai typically visit several projects before settling on one. The Hindu Property Expo 2026, presented by Bank of Baroda, seeks to shorten that process, bringing together over 200 projects from more than 45 developers at the Chennai Trade Centre, Nandambakkam. The expo opens today and runs through September 6, from 10 a.m to 8 p.m.

Mehul H. Doshi, president of CRE-

DAI, is the chief guest of the event and the guests of honour will include Suman Voora, Secretary, CREDAI Chennai, and Ravindra Rai M., Chief General Manager, Bank of Baroda.

The expo will feature apartments, villas, plots, farmlands and houses across multiple locations and price segments. Visitors can explore new launches and upcoming developments, along with special expo offers and limited-period schemes, and interact directly with developers and project representatives. The expo will also provide information on home loans and financing options, while allowing visitors to compare projects, locations, pricing and configurations.

The line-up this year points to a shift in Chennai's property market. OMR and ECR remain in demand, but developers are reporting rising interest in GST Road, Kundrathur-Mount Poonamallee Road and North Chennai. Better connectivity, ongoing infrastructure projects and the emergence of new employment hubs appear to be pushing buyers beyond the city's traditional hotspots.

The expo's offerings span new launches, apartments and independent houses, catering to first-time buyers, those looking to upgrade, and investors alike. Legal experts and architects will be stationed at the venue to field questions – from documentation to site-specific concerns – before buyers commit.

With multiple developers and locations on view, the expo's chief draw for visitors is likely to be the convenience of comparison: the ability to weigh options, raise questions, and find the right match – whether that means a home for the family, a property to grow into or an investment for the future.

The relatively favourable rental market also supports this resilience. According to JLL data, rentals range from ₹70 to ₹135 per sq.ft. in the CBD, ₹80 to ₹125 per sq.ft. in Guindy and ₹80 to ₹135 per sq.ft. in OMR Zone 1. Rentals are lower in emerging locations such as GST Road, at ₹46 to ₹55 per sq.ft., and Ambattur, at ₹40 to ₹65 per sq.ft. Chennai also has one of the tightest office markets among the major cities, with an overall vacancy rate of 6.8%, the lowest among Indian cities – all others recorded double-digit vacancy rates.

Occupier demand is strong
“Chennai recorded Grade-A office completions of 2.4 million sq.ft. in the first half of 2026. In Q2, it was 0.2 million sq ft.,” says Jerry Kingsley, senior director of JLL, a property advisory. “This demonstrates that occupier demand remains strong and resilient, even as new inventory enters the market at a more moderate pace.”

According to him, Chennai gross leasing stood at 3.98 million sq.ft. in H1 2026, up 2.2% year-on-year from 3.89 million sq.ft. in the same period last year. The second quarter this year accounted for 2.4 million sq.ft. This sustained momentum reflects resilient demand fundamentals and consistent occupier activity.

Role of GCC

Chennai has historically been a hub for manufacturing and industrial occupiers, followed by BFSI (Banking, Financial Services, and Insurance), telecom, healthcare and biotech. Global Capability Centres (GCC) are now playing a significant role in office space take-up across these sectors.

“This year, GCCs dominated Chennai leasing activity, representing 49.8% in H1 2026 and accelerating to 58% in Q2. IT/ITES companies led this demand, followed by BFSI and manufacturing occupiers. This broad-based participation reinforces Chennai's appeal as a multi-industry capability centre hub,” says Kingsley. The city is home to approximately 9%-10% of India's GCCs and has recorded more than 14.6 million sq.ft. of leasing over the years. In H1 2026, technology firms accounted for 29% of GCC leasing, followed by life sciences (19%), infrastructure, real estate and logistics (16%), engineering and manufacturing (13%), research and consulting (13%), and telecom (5%), according to CBRE data. “GCCs will continue to be among the largest absorbers of office space in Chennai. While newer companies from different countries make a beeline for Chennai, I expect the next wave of growth to come from established GCCs in other cities,” says Ramkumar Rama-moorthy, Partner, Catalinics and former CMD, Cognizant India.

Pull of fintech

AI is also likely to reshape office-space demand. “With India emerging as the world's second-largest hub for enterprise AI talent, more global companies will expand their footprint here. This will drive growth and office space consumption,” adds Ramamoorthy.

While FinTech City would serve as the hub, it could also create an ecosystem of financial GCCs around it, including banks, NBFCs, FinTechs and insurers. “We've seen strong absorption, a healthy pickup in new Grade-A supply, and a clear acceleration in demand from GCCs [in Chennai]. Alongside, technology, BFSI, and engineering and manufacturing occupiers remain key demand drivers anchoring the city's leasing activity,” says Thirumal Govindraj, CEO, RMZ, a real estate company.

Flexible formats

In Chennai, co-working providers led H1 gross leasing with a 26.9% share, followed by IT/ITES companies at 25.3%. Together, they accounted for more than half of the city's leasing activity. “Co-working, originally considered a competitor to developers, has now become complementary – both to developers as well as end users. It will evolve in more dimensions,” says Rajesh Babu, chief

Chennai's suburban business districts are well positioned to lead future supply, with Mount-Poonamallee Road expected to deliver 6.0 – 8.0 million sq. ft. over the next five years. This is followed by the Radial Road

JERRY KINGSLEY

consultant, real estate service Asset Advise. The shift towards flexible formats is also being seen in managed offices. “Chennai is evolving beyond the traditional office model. Businesses today want workplaces that can scale with them, move faster and adapt to changing needs. Managed offices are becoming a strategic real estate solution and not just a flexible alternative,” says Y.S. Sunil Reddy, founder and chairman, Work EZ.

Suburbs are emerging markets

According to CBRE's supply data for H1 2026, Radial Road accounted for nearly 37% of completed office space, followed by OMR Zone 1 (Taramani/Perungudi) and Mount Poonamallee Road, with about 26% each. In terms of absorption, OMR Zone 1 led with about 40%, followed by Radial Road at 22%.

“As a strong alternative to OMR, Radial Road and Mount Poonamallee Road are emerging as prominent micro markets for commercial office space supply and absorption. Future growth for the city could emerge from these two zones,” says Mehra.

Kingsley agrees. “Chennai's suburban business districts [SBDs] are well positioned to lead future supply, with Mount-Poonamallee Road expected to deliver 6.0 – 8.0 million sq.ft. over the next five years,” adds Kingsley. “This is followed by Radial Road with a supply of 4.0 – 5.0 million sq.ft. in the pipeline. Together, these two submarkets account for nearly two-thirds of Chennai's total upcoming supply, reflecting strong developer confidence in expanding beyond established business districts to meet growing occupier demand.”

Though smaller than the top four cities in terms of office space absorption and supply, Chennai is likely to continue growing on its diverse strengths rather than relying on one or two sectors.

Rashmi Gopal Rao

N umaysh Sugathan, a project manager based in Bengaluru, recently bought a house worth a crore in the city. She felt that a premium apartment, which would usually be around ₹75 lakh to ₹1 crore, wasn't a big budget anymore.

“One crore today does not feel like a luxury budget. In many places, it is almost the bare minimum you need for a decent 2 BHK,” Sugathan says, adding that she went in dreaming of a 3 BHK, but had to settle for a 2.5 BHK because each extra square foot and better location came with a huge jump in price.

Five years ago, a budget of ₹1 crore to ₹1.2 crore could secure a standard 600-650 sq.ft. 2 BHK unit in Mumbai. Today, that same budget yields only a compact 400-450 sq.ft. 1 BHK. In respectable developments, around 420 sq.ft. is a market sweet spot. “To secure a 2 BHK in a quality building today, buyers must expect to spend ₹2 crore or more,” says Sharan Babani, director of design, development, sales and acquisitions at Satguru Builders.

The squeeze is visible across markets. From 2019 to Q2 2026, average residential prices have grown by about 90% in Bengaluru, 93% in Hyderabad, 64% in Mumbai and 51% in Pune. A budget that could have bought a large two-bedroom house in an established neighbourhood five years ago may now require buyers to compromise on size,

The new ₹1-crore home

In Bengaluru, Surat and other cities, middle-class buyers are stretching budgets to secure space and connectivity location or amenities.

This is not just the case with major Indian metropolitan cities, but also with several tier-2 cities. “I feel ₹1 crore is now more or less the starting point for a decent home in a good locality in Surat. While it is still a significant investment, it does not necessarily feel like a luxury anymore,” says Kalpa Tandon, 56, an educator from Surat. “For a comfortable home in a well-connected neighbourhood, it is increasingly becoming the norm.”

No longer a luxury benchmark

Given a combination of factors, including rising costs and a strong demand for premium housing, residential property prices in India have been growing anywhere between 5% and 7%. “In several major metropolitan markets, particularly Mumbai, Bengaluru, and parts of Pune and Hyderabad, it is increasingly becoming the budget at which buyers enter the organised, amenity-led housing segment,” says Pushpamitra Das, chairman and managing director of JUSTO RealFintech Ltd, a real estate growth platform. Based on recent reports, houses worth more than ₹1 crore contributed to 54% of sales in the top eight cities in H1 2026 – an increase from 49% a year ago.

This suggests a fundamental shift in the residential housing market. This figure is increasingly shaping up to be an upper-middle-class city-dwelling budget rather than a luxury benchmark.

But the rise in ticket sizes does not necessarily mean that all buyers have moved up the income ladder. It is a mix of genuine premiumisation and higher prices. Dual-income households, for instance, may be earning enough to service larger loans more comfortably than before, supporting demand for higher-ticket homes. At the same time, if home prices rise faster than incomes, buyers are forced to spend more simply to maintain the same standard of housing.

For a household earning ₹60,000-80,000 a month, a ₹1-crore home remains a significant stretch rather than a natural upgrade. The phenomenon, therefore, reflects not only rising purchasing power but also widening housing inequality, with some buyers being pushed out of the ₹60-₹70 lakh segment altogether.

According to a Knight Frank India report, sales in the ₹1-₹2 crore segment were led by Bengaluru, with 12,808 homes sold, followed by Mumbai with 10,651 and Hyderabad with 8,588.

Driving factors

Price inflation is being driven by compounding construction and land replacement costs, systemic neighbourhood gentrification and extensive urban redevelopment. “Over the past year, raw material costs have surged by 25% to 30%, while site labour costs in prime urban pockets have nearly doubled. Also, factors like expanding metro networks have become the single best long-term amenity for sheer daily convenience, driving up land valuations in peripheral hubs,” says Babani.

One of the most significant trends is the way infrastructure is creating new centres of urban value. “Metro stations, expressway interchanges, airports and large employment clusters are changing how buyers assess location. For Bengaluru, this creates a particularly strong opportunity. As connectivity improves, buyers are comfortable considering locations beyond traditional central districts, provided the overall ecosystem offers convenience, accessibility and quality of life,” adds S.B. Sarveshaa, chairman and managing director, BHA-DRA Group.

In Hyderabad, infrastructure growth and the expansion of the city towards new employment corridors have pushed land values and, consequently, home prices upwards

Similarly, in Hyderabad, premium housing growth has been closely linked to the expansion of the IT and business ecosystem. “Infrastructure growth and the expansion of the city towards new employment corridors have pushed land values and, consequently, home prices upwards. Areas along the western corridor, particularly around the financial district, Kokapet and Narsingi, have seen a clear shift towards larger and higher-value homes,” says Nitya Reddy, marketing head of Signature One Developers, luxury residences in Hyderabad. Thus, the combination of land value, infrastructure value and lifestyle value increasingly determines the future of housing.

What buyers expect now

Regulatory compliance, environmental requirements, safety standards and project infrastructure have added greater depth to the development process. “Another important point is the fact that buyer expectations have changed substantially,” says Sarveshaa. “Larger balconies, natural light, ventilation, landscaped spaces, clubhouses, fitness facilities, work-from-home areas, smart-home features and community amenities have become part of the residential proposition.”

There is no denying that community and amenities have become necessities. “Reliable electricity, parking, water, security, walking spaces, a swimming pool, and places to unwind have become essential, especially with how busy our lives are,” adds Sugathan.

According to Hariganesh Krishnan, 53, who recently bought an apartment in Bengaluru, his top three non-negotiables for buying a house were location, connectivity and builder reputation. He bought an apartment as investment, with rental yields being the deciding factor; he chose a well-known builder, expecting the amenities to be of a high standard.

Growing demand

Homebuyers are clearly willing to stretch budgets, driven by rising formal-sector salaries, dual-income households, easier credit access and the deep-seated cultural aspiration of homeownership in India. “First, there are existing homeowners who are upgrading, often by selling their current property and moving into a better one. Second, there are NRI investors, particularly those looking at markets such as Gurgaon and Noida for rental yields and long-term investment potential,” says Aditya Goel, co-founder of One Prastha, a real estate developer based in Sonipat, Haryana. The movement is therefore a combination of real wealth creation and forced capital outlay. While upper-middle-class incomes have expanded, urban property markets are also forcing buyers to spend significantly more to retain baseline housing standards. This is part of a broader process of gentrification, where middle-class buyers are gradually priced out of established urban hubs and pushed towards expanding suburban commuter belts. Higher prices might be expected to push buyers towards older homes or rentals, but neither is necessarily emerging as a dominant alternative.

Renting, meanwhile, remains a city- and income-specific decision. In Bengaluru, where rents in established employment corridors are high, some buyers prefer to service an EMI rather than pay rent indefinitely. Others, particularly those with lower disposable incomes or a need for flexibility, may find renting more practical.

Explaining the budget

What does ₹1 crore home mean for a buyer? It does not mean a ₹1-crore outlay on the day of purchase. Assuming a 20% down payment, a buyer would need about ₹20 lakh upfront, apart from registration, legal and other transaction costs.

The remaining ₹80 lakh would typically be financed through a home loan. Depending on the interest rate and tenure, the EMI could be around ₹80,000 to ₹1 lakh a month. An indicative gross monthly income of at least ₹2.5 lakh would provide a more comfortable affordability range, although the actual requirement would vary depending on existing liabilities, loan tenure, interest rate and lender norms.

Looking ahead

The ₹1-crore benchmark is likely to evolve further. “Over the next three to five years, baseline entry thresholds will continue upward. Compounding asset value at standard rates of 12% per annum yields nearly a 60% baseline appreciation,” says Babani. “Combined with general inflation and the significant execution challenges developers face in securing projects, entry-level thresholds in urban hubs will comfortably push past current levels.”

The future of Indian real estate will increasingly be defined by value rather than price alone. Buyers will ask what a home provides in terms of time saved, connectivity, wellness, community, design, sustainability and long-term asset value.

Thulci Aluwihare

I ndia has become the world's largest destination for Global Capability Centres (GCCs), housing approximately 2,177 centres employing over two million professionals. The next phase of this success, however, may not be contained within the country's borders.

India's commercial real estate market is experiencing phenomenal growth, and its momentum has started spilling over into neighbouring countries such as Sri Lanka. As major investment destinations mature, it is natural that they begin to reshape the economic geography of their surrounding regions. Companies that establish large operations eventually seek complementary locations for specialised functions, business continuity, and R&D. Rather than diminishing the primary market, these secondary hubs strengthen it.

The new entrant

Colombo in Sri Lanka appears to be approaching precisely that moment. The discussion among Indian companies is no longer around whether they should expand internationally, but where certain functions should be located as their operations become increasingly regional. This should not be mistaken for competition.

Colombo is not trying to become the next Bengaluru, Hyderabad or Gurugram. It neither possesses India's scale nor seeks to replicate it. The opportunity lies in complementing India's ecosystem through highly specialised operations that benefit from geographic proximity and a progressive regulatory environment. The emergence of smaller, specialised GCCs illustrates this shift.

Unlike traditional GCCs employing thousands of people, Nano GCCs focus on AI, product engineering, treasury management, data analytics, cybersecurity and research teams comprising only a few dozen highly skilled professionals. These operations value speed, resilience and connectivity as much as scale.

Such a team does not require everything India's largest cities offer. It requires fast approvals, unrestricted capital mobility, specialised talent with lower attrition and a time zone compatible across India, the Gulf and Europe within a single working day. Colombo sits right at that intersection. Around an hour by flight from Chennai, its strategic location enables seamless regional integration.

What is actually moving

The data suggests this evolution is already underway. Businesses approved within Sri Lanka's only foreign currency-designated Special Economic Zone adjacent to Colombo's existing CBD represented more than $600 million in committed investment in the first half of 2026 alone, according to Sri Lanka's Finance Ministry. Indian visitors continue to represent the island country's largest tourism market, reinforcing the depth of cultural and commercial ties between the two countries.

India's own momentum shows little sign of slowing down. CBRE reported the country's highest-ever quarterly office absorption of 24.6 million square feet in Q2 2026, driven largely by GCCs, multinationals and technology firms doubling down. As companies commit more deeply to India, they are also looking for complementary locations that can support their growth ambitions whilst diversifying their geographical risk.

Regulatory agility

Infrastructure may attract attention, but in practical terms, it's governance that determines investment decisions. Businesses evaluate locations through operational simplicity: approval speed, regulatory clarity and capital mobility. This is where South Asia's emerging business destinations are beginning to differentiate themselves. SEZ frameworks enabling 100% foreign ownership, foreign-currency operations, single-window governance, sector-specific tax incentives and long-term (5-10 year) work visas are creating operating environments aligned with globally mobile businesses.

History demonstrates that economic success rarely remains confined within national borders. Germany's industrial expansion reshaped Central Europe. Singapore accelerated Southeast Asia's integration into global commerce. Dubai evolved alongside the Gulf's broader economic transformation rather than independently of it. India's rise is likely to have a similar regional effect.

The future of South Asia is unlikely to be defined by competing skylines seeking to outgrow one another. Instead, it is more likely to be a network of interconnected business destinations, each contributing distinct capabilities to a shared South Asian growth story.

For Sri Lanka, the opportunity is therefore not to compete with India, but to become indispensable to its continuous success.

Delhi's Transit Oriented Development must put people and public life at the heart of urban growth

If you walk through the streets of Chandni Chowk in Delhi or the

As Delhi moves towards implementing the recently notified Transit Oriented Development (TOD) Regulations 2026, this understanding becomes increasingly relevant. Most of the current conversation around this policy is heavily focused on financial and engineering metrics, from the uniform ₹10,000 per square meter improvement charges and the unlocking of 207 square kilometres of land to towers climbing to unprecedented heights with an FAR (Floor Area Ratio) of 500. These changes are definitely important for a rapidly growing city. However, they should also make us think about something bigger: how do we ensure that these transit districts function as lived urban environments, rather than becoming purely transit-linked development zones?

It is the edges of suburban railway stations, the streets outside older metro entries, or the mixed-use stretches around interchanges that carry continuous activity.

Overall, this calls for a shift in master-planning questions, moving away from how many commuters a system can push through a corridor to how those individuals actually experience the space.

High density does not have to mean corporate placelessness. Instead, drawing inspiration from the material palettes and passive-cooling vocabularies of our heritage, we can create infrastructure that establishes an intuitive sense of place.

Ultimately, the success of Delhi's TOD policy will be celebrated through density optimisation working hand in hand with human experience. It will lie in creating districts that remain deeply connected to the everyday life of the city, where high-density corridors mature into empathetic, deeply integrated neighbourhoods rather than being defined solely by transport efficiency.
