A manhole cover and a sequence of events

After The Hindu Downtown expressed concern over a protruding manhole lid, one covering a duct for optic fibre cables, on Bazullah Road in T. Nagar, remedial action was taken; and then an 'emergency' work undid the remedy. After this work is completed, the issue should also be conclusively addressed

BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

In its T. Nagar edition dated August 30, 2006, The Hindu Downtown ran an article, "A safety hazard on busy Bazullah Road" calling attention to a protruding manhole cover that reflected the behaviour of a school bully on the corridor, sticking a leg out and tripping unsuspecting fellow students.

Only that the problem on Bazullah Road in Ward 133 of Greater Chennai Corporation was bigger and not the least bit funny. According to eyewitness accounts, including one by a shopkeeper at a small business nearby, two-wheeler riders were bumping into the manhole cover and there would be a fall now and then.

After The Hindu Downtown raised this concern, the manhole was neatly cemented around its outer perimeter, providing a slope that would help wheels ease over it. This intervention was almost immediate. And later, there was digging: a pit extending right into the earth where the manhole was.

A GCC official familiar with the development on the ground, quite literally in this case, noted that the manhole was providing access to ducts running underneath to carry optic fibre cables (OFCs). Following the article, when GCC took up the matter with them, they promptly set things right to ensure road users' safety. However, immediately thereafter, an OFC-related fault necessitated the digging, and for which they sought GCC's permission, the official pointed out, adding that when they put the manhole lid back in after closing the trench, it would be ensured that it is not "conspicuous" and not does cause any threat to pedestrians' safety.

‘Road in Lake Area waits for relaying’

R. MURUGAPPAN

Seventh Cross Street at Lake Area in Nungambakkam is in a shambles for the past few years. The battered road gives room for water-logging even on account of a short spell of rain.

Greater Chennai Corporation officials had promised to relay the road in early 2025 but the road continues to be in a deplorable state. GCC cites delay in completion of a work of the Chennai Metropolitan Water Supply & Sewerage Board for the delay in relaying the road.

There are no dedicated footpaths. Parking of vehicles eats into the road margins. The road is also unhygienic as it is misused as an open public convenience. Further, debris and other kinds of waste are discarded here. In other words, the pedestrian space is usurped on this road.

The road is also misused for consumption of liquor. Every morning, liquor bottles can be found strewn along the road.

The road is also inadequately lit because the height of the street lights is too high.

Yet another concern is stray dogs. A good number of dogs roam this street, and they often chase motorists.

‘Frequent power cuts in Kattupakkam’

Power supply disruption has become frequent at Kattupakkam PG Avenue near Porur. There is power cut almost every day including in the night hours.

The power cut duration ranges from five minutes to two hours several times of the day. There is no response to our phone calls to the department.

Saligramam RWA disappointed with SWD desilting work

Kavery Rangan Nagar Residents Welfare Association in Saligramam is unhappy about the desilting work carried out in the stormwater drains recently.

“The sediments and silt that were collected from the SWDs are lying near the inlets. Half of this silt has already washed back into the stormwater drain following the recent rains. And the remaining will also return to the drain as rains are expected. This makes the desilting exercise pointless,” says S.N. Rajaram, a resident.

The Association also raised the issue of lack of inlets for stormwater drains in MGR Street and Durai Arasan Street.

“Both the streets are prone to waterlogging during rains. There are stormwater drains here but they fail to deliver because there are no provisions for the water to enter the SWDs. For the past many months, we have raised this issue with the Greater Chennai Corporation but our efforts were to no avail,” says N.S. Ramachandran, an active member of the association.

The Association also sees the need to mend the footpath at K. K. Salai. “The footpath in K. K. Salai is battered in many spots. In some stretches, there are deep pits where rodents are found. Pedestrians avoid the footpath during rains. This has been the case for the past five years and several online complaints were made to the Greater Chennai Corporation. But our efforts were to no avail,” says S. Sundarasan, another active member of the association.

Geopolitics in a tea cup

In addition to the unique flavours that teas from the Government-run TanTea plantations and factory in The Nilgiris bring to the cup, the lingering taste comes from what the initiative represents: helping Tamil repatriates from Sri Lanka, from the 1970s onwards. T. Arunkumar who runs a TanTea dealership with three outlets in Chennai, along with his father S. Thiruvassagam, on the heady combination of empowerment and tea tasting

LAKSHMY HARIKRISHNAN

A sprinkle of TanTea retail tea shops operate across Tamil Nadu, largely run by distributors of Tamilnadu Tea Plantation Cooperation Limited, shortened to TanTea. In Chennai, habitués of Mylapore have likely noticed a TanTea shop abutting the Kapaleeswarar temple tank on RK Mutt Road. If they have not, they cannot be a habitué of that part of town, as this outlet pitched tent there nearly 11 years ago.

And it is likely that even the habitués of that area are unaware that those teas sold in cups as well as in packets in cover designs befitting a brand have a connection with the TanTea headquarters and factory on Orange Grove Road at Conoor. The packets are shipped from there. The odds are even lower that they know that tea plantations in The Nilgiris that follow the clonal plantation model support the making of those teas. And it is even more likely that they do not know that “kindness” is an ingredient that went into the establishment of TanTea. When it was established in 1968 under the Chief Ministership of C.N. Annadurai, it was known as Government Tea Project. From the 1970s onwards, the Tamil Nadu Government had kept these plantations going to support Tamil repatriates from Sri Lanka, providing them with livelihoods linked to the maintenance of the plantations and the production of teas. Reportedly, the initiative received a huge impetus from M.G. Ramachandran during his terms as Chief Minister of Tamil Nadu as he viewed it as a vehicle delivering justice to uprooted Sri Lankan Tamils.

These are the factors that make what swirls in that cup at a TanTea outlet special, of course in addition to the unique flavours and taste those teas bring to the teapot.

The Mylapore outlet is run by a TanTea dealership, Giri and Co, whose reins are wielded by the father-son duo of S. Thiruvassagam and T. Arunkumar. They have two other outlets, one at Kotturpuram on Gandhi Mandapam Road, inside the CM’s Call Centre premises, widely known as Government Data Centre, and the other at the Kilambakkam Bus Terminus; both outlets are of recent mint, having been established in 2025 and 2024 respectively.

Of the three outlets, the one at Mylapore is an outlier in terms of operational timings. It functions 24 hours, except from a break between 1.30 a.m. and 3.30 a.m., with workers employed on a shift system. The outlet at Kotturpuram functions more like a canteen, the eats varied and meant to be more filling as students from the Anna University nearby as well as those from the Madras School of Economics, located behind the Government Data Centre, step in regularly in addition to the general crowd. On why run a TanTea outlet when fresh competition is always brewing in the tea drinking market, a new chain of pocket-sized tea shops always appearing on the horizon from nowhere, Arunkumar remarks it is partly because of the history of empowerment that goes with the brand, and in part due to the unique appeal those teas make to taste buds.

Arunkumar believes that once the customers taste it, the product speaks for itself. And Arunkumar lines up impressive numbers in terms of footfall for the three outlets, each of which offers eats from its kitchen to go with a range of TanTea teas, including what he calls the latest sensation, fruit and flower teas. The milk tea however remains the major grosser.

From his experience, the tea cup at his TanTea outlets is a leveller, bringing students, corporate employees, auto drivers and bus drivers and conductors, among others, to the same table. He was making a specific reference to the outlet on RK Mutt Road near the Mylapore temple tank: “before Metro Rail work arrived in this area, MTC buses would be parked on RK Mutt Road along the temple tank, and the bus crew would park themselves at the outlet for steaming cups of tea.”

Relationship with Mylapore extends beyond commerce and encompasses community. Arunkumar observes that for nearly a decade, the shop joined the 63 Nayanmars festival at the Kapaleeshwar Temple by ensuring free supply of cool drinks, hot teas and coffees, snacks and even packed cooked rice varieties for four days, serving around 400 people each day. Arunkumar notes his outlets at Mylapore and Kotturpuram have drawn celebrities from within the city, cricketer Sri Sudharshan’s visit being etched in his memory. The photo he clicked with the batsman is a proud possession in his mobile storage folder.

This is not an alumni reunion, but more far-reaching than that. Thanks to an initiative by two educators, every Friday evening, Sherwood Hall Senior Secondary School at Harrington Road in Chetpet opens its gates for residents of the neighbourhood to meet up and renew bonds

LIFFY THOMAS

Every Friday, between 4.30 p.m. and 6 p.m., the play area at the entrance of Sherwood Hall Senior Secondary School at Harrington Road in Chetpet morphs into a meetup space for those in and around the neighbourhood. After-school activities scheduled to be held in the playground are set aside for the benefit of a small circle of people. They gather under a Copper Pod tree on the campus. They bond over a cup of tea, a few activities, laughter and meaningful conversation. Many of them are seniors, and this initiative is tailored for residents of Harrington Road.

This November, 'Under the Copper Pod Tree', as this initiative is fondly called, will turn one. It was envisioned by Shree Vidya, correspondent of Sherwood Hall Senior Rajesh, admin manager at the school who is involved in all the nitty-gritty, says they have a WhatsApp group with close to 60 people.

"Before every meetup, we take a poll to see how many will turn up and if they have some expectations. Accordingly we arrange the logistics including chairs, table, green tea and some snacks," says Manjula.

Members take turns to conduct an activity or open up conversations on a topic. Old residents of Harrington Road, talk on food, art therapy, travel tales, a soulful vee-na recital and so on. Storytelling is a key component of the initiative. Once, members even tried their hand at basketball at the court dedicated to it.

"There is no agenda as such. We just want this to be a place where conversations happen and every individual feels seen, heard and valued," says Manjula, happy with the rich experience she has gained being part of the meetups.

For an institution that does not boast a huge space this gesture is noteworthy. According to the school management, the Copper Pod Collective is a space that members co-create. It is a place where people can gather, talk, slow down, and simply be present. Everyone is welcome. No one is outside the circle, and no one has to fit a mould or live up to expectations.

Mapping lessons beyond the classroom

A geography teacher from the Government Model Higher Secondary School in Nandanam bagged two awards

LIFFY THOMAS

With two awards, it was double the delight for this Geography teacher from Government Model Higher Secondary School in Nandanam, on September 5 when he received the Dr. Radhakrishnan Best Teacher Award from the Tamil Nadu government. And on September 6, the post graduate teacher will be among ten teachers to receive the Vidhya Seva Samman.

Following teaching stints in Ethiopia and a few Indian states, 12 years ago, R. Subramanian eased into the role as government school teacher at KLK Boys Higher Secondary School in Gummidipoondi.

One would have expected the teacher to face a huge culture shock moving to a geography that hugely contrasts with the one he previously operated in, but that was not the case. "From the word go, it was smooth sailing at this school in Tiruvallur district. I am good in classroom management and have also prepared modules to train teachers," he says.

Since 2017, Subramanian has been associated with the school in Nandanam. He worked on bringing about behavioural changes in teenagers. He believes that life's most important lessons are best taught beyond the four walls of the classroom. Be a friend to teenagers, not just their teacher, he says.

A tree planting exercise he initiated on the school campus was much appreciated.

"Engaging students in activities such as nurturing saplings and painting the walls of the school with social message are a few ways I built a rapport with students who would otherwise skip classes," says the 54-year-old teacher who is a resident of Madipakkam.

One of the Subramanian's pet initiatives is anchoring the morning assembly, where relevant news in science and technology or current affairs is presented to students in a capsule format through stories or Thirukkural. This is followed by a question and answer session where students giving the right answer are given goodies by the school headmistress.

Beyond the classroom, the "geography sir" is a resource person with the School Education Department on school safety, a visiting faculty for civil service coaching at Anna Institute of Management in Greenways Road and a trainer at Naan Mudhalvan Competitive Exams programme.

Seven months pregnant and on the podium

After 22 years of dedication to the craft of karate, recognition at the national level arrives at an unlikely time for Ramapuram resident V. Anitha

B. PRABHU

V. Anitha from Chennai bags gold in KATA at an All India Karate Championship. As the reader would note, that is a regular line one that jumps at them every other morning from newsprint.

Read the now bolstered with other details that went with that achievement.

"V. Anitha, 30 years old, a resident of Ramapuram in Chennai, bags gold in the Individual Kata competition at the All India Karate Championship held at Vatakara in Kerala, on August 29 and 30, 2026. And she was seven months pregnant."

The two-day championship, conducted by Alan Thilak Karate School, drew the participation of more than 1,500 students across categories for men and women. The Kerala team won the overall championship title and the Tamil Nadu team secured second place.

V. Anitha. PHOTOS: SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

Anitha could head to that championship clearly because her family, particularly her husband Prithviraj, backed her in that decision; but the larger motive power that got her there, and eventually onto the podium, is the sense of practising karate, in the competitive arena and outside.

Anitha began learning karate when she was studying in Class III, actively participating in competitions and winning several prizes even in her school days. When she was in Class X, she faced opposition from her family regarding her decision to persist with karate. However, she remained determined, won her family over to her point of view and continued her training.

She later joined SIET College and completed her

B.Com degree. She subsequently worked with Larsen & Toubro (L&T) and other corporate organisations. Although she had established a career in the corporate sector, karate remained her life-long passion. She eventually made a conscious decision to leave her corporate career, not because of work commitments, but because she wanted to make karate her "profession and purpose in life" and use what she had learned to contribute to society.

A major influence throughout her journey has been her guru, Hanshi A. Appuraj, an 8th Dan Black Belt with more than 40 years of experience in karate. A national champion in 1996, Hanshi A. Appuraj has trained more than 10,000 students and continues to guide karate practitioners as an instructor of Alan Thilak Karate School. Anitha has trained under his guidance for more than 22 years, making his mentorship an integral part of her journey.

Anitha's training under Alan Thilak Karate School, founded by Dai Sensei Moses Thilak, has also been an important part of her martial arts career. The legacy of the institution is now being carried forward under the technical leadership of Sensei Neil Moses and other senior technical directors.

Over more than two decades, Anitha has built an impressive competitive record. She has been a Thiruvallur District Women's Category Champion for more than 10 years, along with several achievements at the State and National levels. She has participated and won medals in numerous district, state and national-level championships. In February 2026, she also secured a medal at the State Championship.

Her achievements have extended beyond the competition arena. She received the Young Achiever Award from the Department of Commerce at SIET College, recognising her accomplishments and contribution.

After choosing karate as her profession, Anitha began using her experience to empower others. She currently works as a 5th Dan Black Belt, Karate master, self-defence coach and personal safety strategist. She conducts martial arts, self-defence and personal safety programmes for women employees in corporate organisations, college students and school girls.

In 2024, Anitha married Prithviraj, who has continued to support her karate journey and goals, chief aiming them is empowering women with self-defence training.

Alumni association launches digital platform

The Alumni Association of Sri Ramachandra Institute of Higher Education & Research launched its digital alumni engagement platform recently. According to a press release, it is supported by a software called AlmaShines.

The event witnessed the participation of around 500 alumni from various batches. Three distinguished alumni took part as special guests. They are: Dr. Haripriya Aravind, Head of Cataract and IOL Services, Aravind Eye Hospital, Chennai; Dr. Saveetha Rajesh, Director, The Pupil International School and NMV University, Chennai; and Dr. Yashwanth Kumar V., Honorary Consul of the Republic of El Salvador. On the occasion, the association awarded scholarships to meritorious students. The platform was inaugurated by SRIHER chancellor V.R. Venkatachalam in the presence of trustee Samyuktha Venkatachalam, adds the press release.
