Understated opulence and abundant daylight permeate the show villa's interiors. PALATE BY DESIGN

Architecture meets gastronomy

What happens to design when some of the country's leading architects and chefs collaborate?

Lavanya Chopra

What happens when architecture plays collaborator rather than a mere backdrop to food? We are used to thinking of dining as an experience led by aroma and taste, with spaces quietly receding into the background. Yet, spaces bear the ability to shape one's rendezvous with food.

When the two disciplines meet as equals, a carefully choreographed dialogue between the built and gastronomy follows. Set within the rolling expanse of Hyderabad's Signature Estates, a private villa community, Palate by Design – curated by Nitya Reddy of Ramky Signature One Pvt. Ltd. – offers a compelling answer. A debut festival of its kind unfolded in January through a series of chef-designer pairings, in which spatial intent and culinary expression were developed in tandem. “With Palate by Design, fine dining, architecture, and lifestyle retail have surged with new energy. At the estate, instead of high-volume developments, the focus has been on luxury and rarity,” says Reddy.

Design to drape

Shantnu & Nikhil’s New Delhi store uses generous spacing, softened lighting, and a statement bed

Indian designers Shantnu and Nikhil recently launched their first-ever standalone flagship womenswear store at The Dhan Mill, New Delhi. This has been done in collaboration with Essentia Home, a luxury interior decor store located in New Delhi and Haryana.

“While our womenswear has always been an integral part of the brand, it was often experienced within a bridal or ceremonial context. The store reflects our evolving narrative, moving beyond the aisle to explore a more expressive red-carpet identity,” says Shantnu. The focal point of the store’s design is a statement bed, positioned as a deliberate architect-tural and experiential anchor within the space. “We were mindful of creating an environment that allows for fluid movement and a sense of unhurried exploration. Generous spacing, softened lighting and lounge-like pauses encourage slower engagement with the garments,” says Nikhil. The changing rooms have been designed as a seamless continuation of the store’s overall mood. “We paid particular attention to the curtains – their texture, movement and drape – as they introduce softness and a subtle sense of theatre,” adds Shantnu.

With a colossal 101 acres, Signature Estates offers its patrons 93 villas, designed in a creative alliance with the New Delhi and Ludhiana-based legacy firm Habitat Architects. “Rather than imposing a dense vision onto the land, the project listens to it. The show villa, specifically, is not about presentation – it’s about giving people a sense of how life unfolds across the estate,” reflects Zafar Choudhary, CEO and founding partner at Habitat Architects. The development’s clubhouse bears the DNA of new-age thinking helmed by Sahir Choudhary. “The design focuses on fluid circulation, and experiences that feel active without ever feeling crowded,” Choudhary shares. At the event, immersive pop-ups embodied the dialogue between celebrated designers and acclaimed kitchens. A look at four collaborations sheds light on this exchange.

The writer is a trained architect and design specialist working across architecture, interiors, and the built environment.

Architecture meets gastronomy

(Clockwise from right) The BANNG pop-up, Manav Khanna, a BANNG dish and Farah Agarwal. PALATE BY DESIGN

Rooted modernism

Farah Agarwal, Chestnut Storeys (Chennai) | Chef Manav Khanna, BANNG (Mumbai and Gurugram)

The convergence of spice, heady colour, and ambience crescendos through the crossover between Farah Agarwal, principal designer at Chennai’s Chestnut Storeys and chef Manav Khanna of Gurugram and Mumbai-based BANNG.

Agarwal envisions the pop-up as an intimate dining room, a blend of quiet luxury and considered functionality. Domesticity, the designer figured, is the way to go – layered materials, textured wall finishes, warm woodwork, and plush furnishings to evoke a sense of familiarity. “The idea was to create a space that feels like a home, an intimate dining room of sorts, where guests feel at ease the moment they step in,” shares Agarwal. With years of experience in global kitchens, Khanna’s approach fits seamlessly with this direction, his team guided by curiosity as they explore authentic Thai cuisine. Khanna says, “I wanted an elegant space without being precious, and functional without losing soul. The design translated that beautifully: minimal and tasteful, with just enough warmth and texture to mirror the way we cook.”

For the contemporary curious

Apoorva Shroff, Lyth Design Studio (Mumbai) | Chef Ralph Prazeres, Praça Prazeres (Goa)

At Lyth Design, Mumbai-based architect Apoorva Shroff views design as a trusted medium to relate to people and their built context. This time, Shroff’s design direction reaps inspiration from the Konkani region, drawing upon chef Ralph Prazeres’ sensibility for melding traditional and bold contemporary flavours. The result is a space that mirrors this nuanced balance with rich Indian colour, texture, and artisanal warmth. “A shimmering mirror-box entry opens into sculpted metal arches framing a courtyard – the restaurant’s heart. The experience then settles into a plush, carpeted lounge beneath a glowing wood canopy, where refinement echoes the spirit of the restaurant’s cuisine,” Shroff highlights. “Shroff understood what we stood for at Praça – the warmth of Goan hospitality – and created a setting that translated those feelings into a space where we felt we belonged,” Prazeres recalls. In Panjim’s heart, Praça Prazeres has done the essential for its diners: brought fading simplicity back to the table, where European fare is prepared with precision, celebrating memory and craft on a plate.

Abin Chaudhuri, Nooresha Kably, an Izumi dish and a view of the pop-up. PALATE BY DESIGN

Reign of restraint

Abin Chaudhuri, Abin Design Studio (Kolkata) | Chef Nooresha Kably, Izumi (Mumbai and Assagao, Goa)

Anyone familiar with Abin Chaudhuri’s Kolkata-based practice, Abin Design Studio, and its colossal body of work knows the architect’s devotion to context. The studio’s reliance on collaboration, craft, and public engagement takes a tactile form, creating a venue for Izumi. “This space is an expression of our design philosophy, informed by Japanese minimalism and a belief in restraint as a form of luxury,” notes Chaudhuri. “Chef Nooresha Kably’s culinary philosophy was translated into a spatial language of quiet materiality, controlled detailing, and calibrated proportions.”

Headed by Chef Nooresh Kably, with their home in Mumbai and Assagao, Izumi’s culinary philosophy celebrates all that Japan embodies. Kably further explains, “It was a slow reveal, a multi-layered experience for the diners and the design was perfect for it! It was defined and definite in its central stone table and yet, experientially layered in the screens with glimpses of foliage behind them.”

(Clockwise from below) Gauri Adappa, The Table view, Gauri Devidayal, and one of The Table’s offerings. PALATE BY DESIGN

Familiar echoes

Gowri Adappa, A Design Co. (Chennai) | Gauri Devidayal, The Table (Mumbai)

Time moves more slowly, with leisure permeating its very being within the space Gowri Adappa created for The Table. Partner and co-founder at Chennai-based A Design Co., Adappa’s practice is synonymous with creating spatial experiences that champion local craft and indigenous materiality. Her collaboration with restaurateur Gauri Devidayal of Mumbai’s The Table paints a nostalgic portrait of ingrained warmth. “We introduced furniture, art, and décor that are worldly yet grounded. We worked extensively with traditional and local materials and crafts, reinterpreting them in a modern vocabulary that felt both rooted and current,” reminisces Adappa.

“The space Adappa created for us perfectly complements the food philosophy: It’s relaxed yet thoughtfully curated,” Devidayal says. Devidayal’s culinary destinations are celebrated for their elevated comfort, with ingredient-forward menus. Much like food, good design also thrives on balance, she expresses, “When every element – from materiality to light – is considered, it quietly shapes how a dish is received, deepening the experience without distracting from it.”

From a sartorial statement to a more organic one, the Bézier seating system designed by Brazilian designer Marcio Kogan (founder, Studio MK27) is a true romance of mathematics and art. It is inspired by the legacy of Pierre Bézier, whose parametric curve (used in CAD software) celebrates the fluidity of organic shapes. The collection pays tribute to Brazilian modernism with all its elements embracing curves that fit into each other seamlessly, from the sofas to the low coffee tables that resemble smooth pebbles. The Nico table, on this level, in green textured marble, rests on a unique interlocking base, in marble or wood, holding up the round, oval, rectangular or hexagonal top with soft edges.

Lunar influence

The second floor, with its generous skylights and ivory ceiling, illuminates the living and dining spaces it showcases.

Here, it's the 1970s-inspired Super Moon collection, designed by Giampiero Tagliaferri, with its soft contours, luscious upholstery and an air of playfulness, that steals the show. The shape of the armrests, seat cushions and marble tops evoke a lunar leitmotif, as the upholstered base rests on a floating metal frame.

Lego solutions

The terrace comes alive with the outdoor collection where Minotti imagines the garden in tropical splendour. The Quadrado collection, by Marcio Kogan, is inspired by the duckboard used in the yachting industry, with suspended square platforms, and any number of combinations made possible with an interlocking effect. "A lot of our furniture can be thought of as Legos, where you can keep adding elements to create new arrangements," states Susanna. For the Minotti family, while their business has expanded impressively across the globe, their team of around 300 in Meda, Italy, still mostly deals with local vendors, for their leather, stone and ashwood components. They are, however, curious about materials from overseas.

"We are open to looking at new materials like teak for outdoors, that can be best sourced in Asia. We also see the size of homes changing – some Indian living rooms can accommodate our large sectionals while some choose the smaller seats. For us, the most important design factor is versatility," concludes Susanna, as the family prepares for their showcase at the Salone del Mobile in Milan in April.

Centrepieces start at ₹4 lakh, armchairs from ₹5 lakh, seating systems are upwards of ₹18 lakh.

The freelance writer is based in Chennai.

Anisha Menezes

What really connects Indian homes with Italian ones? While India and Italy share a long and storied history of craftsmanship in handmade sculpture and furniture, Indians today import Italian furniture for its impeccable detail, material honesty, measured maximalism and an astute design language.

Susanna Minotti is an architect, head of interior design, Minotti S.p.A. and third generation of the Minotti family, from Meda, Italy. She was in Bengaluru last week (February 11) to celebrate the first anniversary of the brand's flagship store in the city, in collaboration with Amber Home Interiors, headed by Bhaskar and Sneha Sarda. For her, the two countries are rooted in family. "It's not the aesthetic, but what the home represents, the warmth and comfort of family. And food, that's very important to both Indians and Italians," Susanna tells me.

For three generations, since Alberto Minotti founded the studio in 1948, Minotti has been crafting luxurious furniture, with 80 experience centres across the globe. "These are not showrooms, and we are not selling furniture. We are offering a dream and an experience," observes Alessandro Minotti, general manager, Minotti S.p.A. and third-generation Minotti, present at the anniversary.

Embracing pastels, Brazilian curves

Choosing colours and designing for India has been a unique experience.

While Indian maximalism is making a comeback in interior spaces, choosing to stick with the Italian penchant for pastels has proven to be an unusual but winning choice.

Spread over three levels, the space in HSR Layout was conceived by Minotti Studio over video calls. Each floor at the Minotti experience centre is carefully calibrated. Each piece can be customised, from material to contrast detailing. The Yves bedroom suite is particularly impressive. "Designed by Milan-based Hannes Peer, this is an homage to Yves Saint Laurent, so the seams on the headboard, and bench bear a resemblance to a collection by the couture designer," explains Alessandro.
